McNutt Plan May Shatter Home Front, Says Weiner

Civilian Industries, Services Dangerously Exposed, Declares Supply Director

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Manpower Chief Paul V. McNutt has received an official warning from Director of Civilian Supply Joseph L. Weiner that present manpower policies are leaving vital civilian industries and services dangerously exposed, paving the way for a possible "home front" collapse, it was learned yesterday.

Weiner's warning was a companion piece to a statement by War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson that rationing may have to be extended with widespread business casualties occurring in so-called nonessental lines because of manpower shortages.

Sharply critical of War Manpower Commission policies of listing war activities and a few civilian activities "supporting the war effort" as "essential" and its establishing of lists of nonessential and hence "nondeferable" civilian industry jobs, Weiner expressed fear that many vital civilian production enterprises and services may thus be drained of manpower below minimum necessary levels.

Objects to "Essential"

Nelson also was said to have objected to WMC's use of the word essential, pointing out that too great a curtailment of civilian activities would impede war production.

One of the hottest undercover domestic issues today, the question is tied in with such important decisions as the size of the armed forces and whether clothing rationing is later to be ordered.

Weiner flatly asserted that he would not be responsible for the continued flow of essential civilian goods and services if McNutt's policies are followed.

Nelson emphasized that clothing rationing is not contemplated at present, but acknowledged that clothing may have to be rationed late this year or early next year if manpower estimates provided by McNutt are accurate. He said he planned to "check further" on McNutt's estimate that 3.2 million people must be taken out of nonessential activities by the end of 1943, but admitted that if the figures were true, clothing production might have to be reduced greatly.

Special Conference

Another factor which Nelson is understood to be investigating is the question of whether 1943 manpower requirements for the armed forces cannot be reduced below present schedules to ease the pinch on essential civilian activities.

The War Production Board head called a special press conference to explain further statements on the subject made before a Senate committee which were disclosed yesterday.

"I see no necessity for clothing rationing at the present time," Nelson said. "We have no plans for

Farm Senators To Take Price Fight to People

See Administration Policies Leading To Food Shortage

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Senate farm leaders yesterday decided to take their battle for higher food prices "straight to the public" by means of an open investigation into the Administration's policies on agriculture—policies which they contend will cause serious food shortages before the year is over.

Chairman Smith of the Senate Agriculture Committee announced that a subcommittee will call Food Administrator Wickard to testify early next week in a hearing designed to "blow the lid off so the public will know the desperate outlook for food production due to price-fixing, the manpower shortage and the lack of farm machinery."

All to Be Called

Wickard will be followed by heads of every Government agency concerned with production, transportation and distribution of food, both here and abroad, he declared.

Picked to help conduct the hearings were: Senators Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana, Stewart (Democrat) of Tennessee, Aiken (Republican) of Vermont and Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota.

Senator Aiken declared that administrative agencies have developed a tendency to "do the wrong thing every time they act" and expressed belief the hearings would

Legion Head Backs Ruml Tax Proposal

O'Neal Says System Is Not Workable in Case of Farmers

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Leaders of powerful farm and veterans' organizations were aligned last night beside Beardsley Ruml, New York economist, in favor of by-passing income tax debts on 1942 income in order to get millions of citizens on pay-as-you-go collections.

Roane Waring, National Commander of the American Legion, wired the House Ways and Means Committee:

"I recommend that Congress enact legislation to put the Nation on a pay-as-you-earn basis and that in doing so taxpayers will be required to pay no more than one year's taxes in any year."

His recommendation was in line with the Ruml blueprint and with the program urged earlier by the National (Farm) Grange through its Washington representative, Fred Brenckman.

Sharp Exception

A sharp exception, however, was voiced yesterday by Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, another of the "big four," who wrote Ways and Means Chairman Doughton, that he did not believe the pay-as-you-go principle could be applied to farmers. He indorsed such a system for wage and salary earners so long as it could be started with-

WPB Limits Height of Heels, Restricts Colors of Shoes to 4

The Government yesterday put a ceiling on the height of heels for women's shoes, ruled out leather-covered platform effects, and restricted shoe colors to four—black, white, Army russet and town brown.

In the same order the War Production Board prohibited entirely the manufacture of men's patent leather shoes, women's formal evening slippers and metal-spiked golf shoes for either sex.

Leather frills, bows and ornamental tongues also were banned, in a general overhauling of shoe restrictions to conserve leather for Army use and to spread the available supplies for the rationed civilian population.

This year's output of civilian footwear will be about one-fourth less than the 1941 production, 335 million as against 441 million, WPB estimated. Despite the restrictions, the agency promised that there would be enough patterns to provide "ample style variety" along with staple footwear.

Consumers will not feel the effect of the shoe-streamlining order to any extent until next fall, it was said, because the spring lines already are being manufactured or are on their way to dealers.

The restrictions on color, eliminating blue and turf tan, were adopted to reduce the number of styles carried by retailers and thereby increase the number of

'Magic Eye' Spots Nazi U-Boats In Pitch Dark

New York, Feb. 12 (INS).—The existence of two new devices which have hitherto been closely guarded secrets has just been revealed by the Royal Air Force.

The first is a radio "magic eye" by which planes can spot a U-boat when it comes to the surface to recharge its batteries, even if the operation is performed on the darkest night or in the thickest fog.

The second is a new form of delayed-action bomb which explodes immediately if any attempt is made to remove it before it is due to go off.

Airmen who dropped these bombs from Mosquito bombers in the daylight raid on the Diesel works in Copenhagen on January 27 describe their effect as deadly. Whole factory areas on which they have fallen have to be cleared of personnel, since there is no human way in which the bombs can be removed without a devastating explosion.

General Rommel Is Reported To Be Wounded, Hospitalized

By William Wade
International News Service Staff Writer

London, Feb. 12.—With its highly vaunted leader, Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, wounded and hospitalized at Tunis, the Axis Afrika Korps was said tonight to be occupying a new defense line extending northeastward from a point 65 miles inside Tunisia.

Official confirmation of this report would indicate a sweeping new advance for the British Eighth Army inland from the Mediterranean coast.

The new line, a Cairo dispatch to Reuter's News Agency reported, extends from Ras Ajir on the coast near the Tunisian-Libyan border, inland and southwestward to Foum Tatahouine. This outpost, some 65 miles inside the French protectorate, is 30 miles south of Medenine and 45 south of Mareth, indicating the Eighth Army may be hitting across the Tunisian marshlands in a rapid drive to outflank the strong enemy-fortified Mareth line. Ras Ajir, northern anchor of the reported Axis position, is only a few miles west of the Tunisian-Libyan boundary.

The London Evening Star meanwhile quoted a reliable source in Tunisia as declaring that Rommel was wounded during the recent heavy American raid on Gabes. The dispatch added that Rommel now is in a hospital in Tunis.

The Afrika Korps, it was pointed out, depends in great measure for what prestige it still possesses on Rommel's reputation. Should his leadership be removed even temporarily, the morale of enemy troops is liable to suffer greatly.

While the dispatch gave no hint as to the seriousness of Rommel's wound, the fact that he was reported in Tunis was taken as an indication he was able to travel and probably to confer with Col. Gen. Juergen von Arnim, commander of other enemy forces in Tunisia.

(In New York, C. B. S. heard a British radio broadcast reporting that the Afrika Korps is throwing tanks, artillery and infantry into the battle near Ben Gardane, which is 21 miles west of Ras Ajir. The result, the broadcast declared, was "the biggest action . . . since El Aghella."

(The broadcast said in part: "The

Rommel Nearly Captured in Battle

New York, Feb. 12 (INS).—Nazi Field Marshal Rommel "just escaped being taken prisoner" during the battle of El Alamein, the Dakar radio said today.

The FCC recorded broadcast said the incident occurred when the British captured a number of German tanks.

"An English officer who was taken prisoner and then liberated in this engagement said in one of the escaping tanks was Marshal Rommel in person," the broadcast reported.

Soviet Army Wins Krasnodar, Takes Junction Near Stalino

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Feb. 12.—The Red army has captured Krasnoarmeiskaya, an important rail junction about 25 miles northwest of Stalino, in a steady encirclement effort to trap huge Nazi forces in the Donets Basin, a special Russian communique announced tonight. The German corridor to Rostov has been reduced to 70 miles.

German troops anchored in the Rostov sector below the Donets Basin also were threatened with the fall of the junction on the Dniepropetrovsk-Stalino Railway. Only a single highly-vulnerable outlet at Stalino is left to the German forces extended to the east.

(Unofficial estimates in London said approximately 500,000 Germans in the Donets Basin and at Rostov were endangered.)

Krasnodar in the western Caucasus also was declared to have fallen. That virtually completed the liberation of the Kuban Cossack country, with only Novorossisk 60 miles to the west and a small area north of that Black Sea port remaining in German hands.

20 Miles From Kharkov

In the Kharkov area the Russians were reported only 20 miles from the Ukraine capital after cutting railway lines above and below the city.

(The regular midnight Soviet communique also told of violent fighting south of recaptured Kursk, 120 miles north of Kharkov, in which 200 Germans were captured along with a large quantity of equipment, including 50 guns and 158 machineguns.)

Other gains announced by the Russians:

Shakhty, 45 miles above Rostov, fell to the Russians striking southward toward Rostov, where, unofficial estimates say, 255,000 Germans are based. Other Russian units are near Novocherkassk, 25 miles to the northeast, and are attacking the Nazis in Rostov's suburbs to the south.

Voroshilovsk, 25 miles southwest of Voroshilovgrad, Donets industrial capital, also was seized. This puts the Russian army on three sides of Voroshilovgrad, the pivot for the Axis in the Donets Basin where, unofficial estimates say, 275,000 Germans are fighting against encirclement.

In addition to all these swift and strategically important gains, the Russians were fighting on the approaches to Kharkov, Ukraine capital far to the northwest. All the main feeder lines into Kharkov have been declared cut by the Russians, especially with the capture yesterday of Lozovya, 75 miles to the south.

On the basis of Russian announcements the capture of Krasnoarmeiskaya had this significance:

Round-the-Clock Raid Is Centered on War Installations, Rail Sites

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 12.—Swift British Mosquito bombers struck at northwest Germany this afternoon, rounding out a full day of varied attack on German war installations and communications stretching from Wilhelmshaven through Holland and Belgium to northern France.

The official report did not name the chief target of the daylight attacks, but the designation of northwestern Germany suggested that the bombers returned to the U-boat center of Wilhelmshaven, which was blasted by showers of blockbusters during a heavy preceding night raid.

The whole night and day round of operations, which apparently involved several hundred warplanes, cost the R. A. F. only three bombers and one fighter by official count.

"Great Day for Mustangs"

Summarizing what it called a "great day for the Mustangs," the Air Ministry news service reported these rugged American-built fighters attacked 15 trains, 10 barges, 4 trawlers, numerous vehicles, a parade of troops and military barracks and wrecked several electric pylons.

One freight engine was attacked by R. C. A. F. Pilot Officer Ed Gimbel of Chicago, who reported it stopped after the first swoop and sent up no fire from its anti-aircraft cars on the second attack.

The Mustang operations spread over Holland, Belgium and northern France.

Other attacks on the strained German rail system were made by

U. S. Planes Sink 3 Jap Destroyers

4 More Damaged In Two Attacks Off Guadalcanal

Guadalcanal, Feb. 10 (Delayed). United States bombers and torpedo planes sank three Japanese destroyers and damaged at least four others in two attacks on task forces desperately evacuating Jap officers and technical personnel from Guadalcanal the first week in February, the Navy disclosed today.

United States planes attacked 20 Jap destroyers near New Georgia on the afternoon of February 4. Dive-bombers piloted by Maj. William D. Robertson of East Peoria, Ill.; Lieut. John W. Beebe of White Bear, Minn., and Sergt. Pilot Robert H. Fore of Union, S. C., scored three direct hits on one destroyer, sinking it in three minutes.

Other dive-bombers damaged another destroyer, and the torpedo planes which followed damaged yet another.

The Japanese set up heavy protection by Zero fighters, but 17 of their aircraft were shot down as against 10 of ours.

The remaining Japanese destroyers continued toward Guadalcanal.

Scattered Japanese planes kept up harassing raids on Guadalcanal from 8 p. m. that night until 5 a. m. the following morning.

The destroyers were believed to have landed food and equipment on Guadalcanal and evacuated 1000 men in landing barges under cover of early morning darkness off Cape Esperance.

It was at this time that the second attack took place which sank one destroyer. Another destroyer was sighted in the bay being towed. The Navy believes three others were damaged in this action.

Mme. Chiang Plans to Attend Unity Rallies Throughout U.S.

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Feb. 12.—Plans for appearances by Mme. Chiang Kai-shek at a series of giant rallies in leading cities of the country, including New York, Chicago and San Francisco, were completed here today by a committee of prominent Chinese and Americans, it was learned tonight.

According to the schedule of the committee, of which Bernard M. Baruch, financier, is expected to become chairman, Mme. Chiang will begin her appearances following her visit Wednesday in Washington, where she will be the guest of President and Mrs. Roosevelt. She will appear before a joint session of Congress the following day and will stay in Washington until February 28.

Returning to New York, Mme. Chiang will attend a rally in Madison Square Garden on March 2. Many notables, including several State Governors, have been invited to attend.

On March 5 she is expected to visit Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass., of which she is a graduate. After remaining there several days, she may go to Boston. From there Mme. Chiang will fly to Chicago for a rally expected to be held at Soldiers Field. Silas Strawn, Chicago lawyer and former special envoy to China, was reported to be heading a citizens committee there to handle arrangements.

From the Chicago rally, scheduled for about March 12, Mme. Chiang will leave for the Pacific Coast for further demonstrations in San Francisco and possibly Los Angeles, where many Chinese live. The demonstrations are being held to display Chinese-American unity.

Mme. Chiang arrived in this country amid great secrecy in November. Later it was announced that the purpose of her visit was to receive hospital treatment for an injury suffered when her automobile overturned five years ago while racing through Japanese gunfire.

It was learned tonight that Mme. Chiang's treatments were completed at a New York hospital several days ago, when she left for a destination undisclosed until her official appearance in Washington on Wednesday.

Two Big U. S. Planes Missing In Canada With 13 Aboard

By the Canadian Press

Edmonton, Alberta, Feb. 12.—Two United States cargo transport planes with 13 persons aboard, including service men and civilians, have been missing four days in Canada's wild north country, it was learned here today.

Officers said aerial searches so far have failed to disclose any trace of the transports.

Belief was expressed that all the missing persons were United States citizens. The names were not announced, but authorities said their next of kin had been notified.

One of the planes is missing near Watson Lake, on the British Columbia-Yukon boundary, and the other between Fort Nelson and Fort St. John, B. C. Three persons are aboard one of the ships and the other carried 10.

United States and Royal Canadian Air Force planes joined in the organized search when the planes first were reported missing. They are believed to have been forced down by mechanical trouble.

R. C. A. F. planes from No. 2 air observers school here under direction of Capt. W. R. May and planes of the Northwest Staging Route under Wing Comdr. W. J. McFarland, are assisting United States planes in the search.

United Nations Will Hit Enemy From All Sides, President Vows

By Edward T. Folliard

President Roosevelt said bluntly last night that an Allied victory in Tunisia would be followed by "actual invasions" of Nazi-dominated Europe, and he predicted important actions in the skies "over China and over Japan itself"—a hint of large-scale bombings of Nippon in 1943.

The President emphasized the plural "invasions" in talking about Europe.

"We do not disguise our intentions to make these invasions," the President said, in a speech that followed by one day Prime Minister Churchill's "burn and bleed" oration before the British Parliament.

"The enemy must be hit and hit hard from so many directions that he never knows which is his bow and which is his stern," the President said, amid laughter.

East, West Attacks

This would be achieved, he said, by Russia landing powerful blows from the east, and the American, British, French and other Allied forces striking from the west.

The United Nations, the war President said, would fight on until they march in triumph through the streets of Berlin, Rome and

Welles Urges Planning Now For After War

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 12.—Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, today urged the United Nations to agree now on a postwar program to avert rivalries which he said would be disastrous.

"There could be no surer road to disaster, no surer means of bringing about unmitigated havoc in the future, than for the United Nations to enter the postwar period as rivals and opponents in their commercial and financial policies, rather than as collaborators in a common task of seeking and achieving international economic stability and general well-being," Welles said in an address prepared for broadcast at the opening of United Nations' Month. He added:

"Together we can solve this gigantic problem; opposed to one another, no one of us will profit."

Welles expressed regret that no representative of Soviet Russia was present at the ceremonies.

"Superlatively Required"

"We recognize," he said, "that in any gathering which symbolizes the United Nations, the presence and participation of the Soviet Union is imperatively required."

Answering those who say the Atlantic Charter "should be further clarified," Welles said it seemed to him that it contained "all of the objectives which men and women who are struggling to preserve our civilization and to achieve their own freedom and security would wish to have held up before them."

Much Can Be Done Now

Much now could be done, Welles said, to determine the practical manner in which the police power would be exercised to obtain disarmament of potential aggressors, assure freedom from fear and want, and obtain general economic reconstruction through international cooperation.

Viscount Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, said at the ceremony that mankind "is on the march to preserve those things that it counts most precious; the protection of all that is implied in human personality; the assertion of spiritual values, by which we ...mercy and truth ...red, cruelty and ...

Moscow Warns Of Postwar Plans For Small States

By Wade Werner
Associated Press Staff Writer

Considerable interest has been aroused in official and diplomatic quarters here by a broad hint from Moscow that postwar planners would do well to keep their hands off Bessarabia and the Baltic republics acquired by Soviet Russia in 1940.

All of these territories were taken over by Russia during Hitler's conquest of the Lowlands and France, and his subsequent preparations for the Battle of Britain. Russo-German relations at the time still were ostensibly peaceful under the 1939 non-aggression pact, but commentators in Allied countries were quick to point out that the occupation of Bessarabia, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania must have infuriated Hitler.

After Hitler's attack on Russia in 1941 the same commentators stressed the defensive value to Russia of the newly acquired areas, and added that now it could be understood why Russia fought for and obtained bases in Finland in the winter war of 1939-40.

Status of Territories

Now that Hitler's armies are retreating, however, and retreating on a scale that suggests they soon may have to evacuate the Bessarabian, Estonian, Latvian and Lithuanian areas from which they drove Stalin's armies in 1941, talk has revived in some quarters as to the future status of these and other territories of eastern Europe.

This is where the broad hint from Moscow comes in.

It is contained in an editorial published by Pravda on February 8 and now reprinted in an English translation in the information bulletin of the Soviet Embassy here. Pravda's words habitually get wide diplomatic attention, because that paper is the official mouthpiece of the Communist Party. They receive even more careful study when they are reprinted for emphasis in the embassy bulletin here.

This Pravda editorial criticizes an American columnist for appearing to suggest that Russia seeks not only the destruction of Germany's military might but the domination by Russia of large areas of Europe, not to mention a pathway "through Iran to the Persian Gulf.

It also rebukes him, however, for assertedly implying that the question of the future status of Bessarabia and the Baltic republics is still an open question, subject to future discussion among the powers.

Pravda's Statement

It notes that the columnist "kindly presents us with Bessarabia on behalf of unknown Americans! Why should he not make a generous present of California or Alaska to the United States? Do there not exist curious people who are ready to present to the Soviet Union parts of the latter's own territory, as, for instance, the Baltic republics?

"These persons pretend not to know that the basic law of our country—the constitution of the U. S. S. R.—has fixed the ties between these republics and the other union republics, and that the Red army heroically fights for the honor, independence and integrity of our state."

In view of Pravda's official function, this statement is considered an authoritative reminder from Moscow that the future status of Bessarabia is no more open to question than the future status of California or Alaska, and that the Baltic republics of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania are considered by the Soviet Union as "parts of the latter's own territory."

Diplomats here also were quick to note, however, that the Pravda article does not mention eastern Poland, occupied by Soviet troops under the 1939 Polish-partition agreement with Germany. Whether this means the status of that region is left open for future discussion is not clear, but such an implication could be drawn.

The Jap force was engaged by United States torpedo boats of which three were lost.

From a hill on Guadalcanal we saw the first bright flames near Savo Island at 11:30 p. m. By 2 a. m. three ships could be seen burning. It is believed that one was the third Jap destroyer which the navy later announced as sunk. The other burning ships sighted apparently later succeeded in extinguishing the flames.

bases on the Dnieper River. The railway winds eastward from Zaporozhe near the Dnieper to Stalino. One spur goes southeastward to Taganrog and Rostov; another winds northeastward into the area below imperiled Vorossilovgrad.

With Russian troops only 25 miles from Stalin, the railway is only a slender life line for the advanced Nazi troops. Although there have been roundabout reports that the Germans already were retreating along the Sea of Azov toward the Dnieper River far to the west, the Russian communiques fail to bear this out.

The Soviets still tell of heavy fighting at Rostov, giving the impression that there is far more than merely strong Nazi rearguard action there.

At Krasnodar, 160 miles southwest of Rostov, the Red Army was carrying on another battle of encirclement and annihilation. The fall of Krasnodar pushes the Germans back on Novorossisk, 60 miles away on the Black Sea coast.

(German official announcements, however, indicated the Nazis already were in trouble at Novorossisk. The Nazi high command said the Russian Black Sea fleet had tried to batter its way into the port, and that a German tank division had frustrated Russian outflanking efforts on land.

(The Nazi communique itself appeared to be contradictory, or at least confused, on the fighting in this area.

(Northeast of Novorossisk there is the Taman Peninsula, which is separated from the Crimea by the 7-mile-wide Kerch Strait. This route could be used by the Germans in any attempted flight, but there are few roads through the marshy area.)

Control Railway

The regular midnight bulletin disclosed that the Russians now control the entire railway running northwestward from Krasnodar to Akhtari on the Sea of Azov. This communique announced the capture of Rogovskaya, Timoshevskaya, and Novotitarovskaya, all intermediate points along that line. Tokhtamukai, five miles south of Krasnodar, also was seized.

Thirty-one German planes were destroyed by the Soviet yesterday in nothern Caucasian combat, the communique said, and the captured crews of two German planes shot down in the Krasnodar sector were quoted as saying they were transferred from Tunisia in North Africa "several days ago." The Russians have announced previously that captured prisoners on other fronts had been shifted from western Europe to Russia.

In the battle for Rostov this bulletin said Soviet troops repelled five German infantry and tank counterattacks, knocking out 11 enemy tanks. The Germans were reported "resisting stubbornly."

In capturing Krasnoarmeiskaya in the Ukraine the Russians said their troops had "cut the most important railway communication of the enemy."

To the northwest the battle for Kharkov still appeared to be in its initial stages although the Russians were reported only 20 miles from the big steel city where the Germans are reported to have strong reserves.

Heavy African Mud Failed To Stop British Commandos

By Ross Munro
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With British Commandos on the Tunisian Front, Feb. 10 (Delayed) (AP).—British commandos, supported by French troops, carried out a bold raid on the Bizerte corner of Tunisia last night, while British infantry carried out a simultaneous attack on the right flank, killing 200 Italians and capturing 20 Italians and several German officers.

(A DNB dispatch broadcast today by the German radio and recorded by the Associated Press said attacking British and Americans in north Tunisia had been ambushed and "wiped out." In central Tunisia, the broadcast said, American reconnaissance forces "felt their way toward advanced fortified Axis positions west of Faid, but were easily repulsed by Axis fire.")

I slogged with these crack commando troops into the rugged hills northwest of Mateur, near the Mediterranean, and watched them shoot up Italian posts, blow up roads and lay mines.

They penetrated deep into enemy territory and threw the area into turmoil.

British artillery also was in action as part of the raiding operation, which was one of the largest carried out in this campaign. Engineers went along and demolished roads.

In 48 hours in the hills the commandos marched more than 50 miles over rough country, the muddiest I have ever seen. Sometimes we were knee deep in slimy mud and after 20 miles I fell behind with wornout feet and watched the rest of the attack from a hilltop.

Enemy planes strafed us and then bombed us. One 500-pounder dropped 30 feet away without damage. There was some sniping and indiscriminate firing in the hills as we moved forward. The commandos pulled off this land coup with a great flourish and withdrew right on schedule with only a handful of casualties.

action is developing into a struggle for the mud tracks which cover the marshy frontier area. These tracks lead northwest to the important center of Ben Gardane, which guards the way to Mareth and Gabes."

(The Afrika Korps was said to be holding the tracks with heavy guns, but was caught off guard by a British drive launched unexpectedly soon after heavy rains had drenched the sector.)

Robert G. Nixon, International News Service correspondent at Allied headquarters in Tunisia, reported that snow and rain restricted activity. American A-20's escorted by Americans flying Spitfires and Warhawks, raided German-occupied Sened, 20 miles west of Maknassy which doughboys occupied and then evacuated last week. Other Spitfires and Airacobras made a sweep over the front, it was announced. No American planes were lost.

The raid on Sened, a railway town of importance, was concentrated on troops, vehicles and vital installations. Fragmentation bombs were seen to burst among enemy personnel, trucks and guns.

(Earlier reports of a British-French attack in the Mateur sector were amplified by a British radio broadcast which declared German and Italian prisoners were brought back to Allied lines by the raiding forces. The broadcast, heard in New York by C. B. S., said that many Italians were killed during the attack, which resulted in "very few" losses to the Allies.)

Cold Death Stalks Nazis On Red Front

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Feb. 12.—Driving snow and cold death ride the Russian-German front:

Winter's feared "Buran" has begun.

Buran is an old Russian word meaning a whirlwind of snow. It cuts at you from every direction, the fine, biting particles of snow seeming even to slash upward from the ground.

Roaring winds across the great flat steppes add to the suffering horror. The Buran freezes noses, cheeks, and chins, it claws through the warmest clothing.

One of the worst mental trials in the history of the present German army is the memory of Stalingrad. Dispatches from the front say German prisoners freely tell their captors that Stalingrad is a terrible thought for invading soldiers to reflect upon.

German soldiers entrenched in the villages, even the smallest, realize they may become another Stalingrad as the Russians push forward their ring of encirclement.

Harassed by this specter, the Nazis are illuminating large sectors of the front with rockets at night, trying to protect themselves against nocturnal encirclements.

The severe cold has caught many Germans. When Soviet troops arrvied at a hospital north of Kursk, they found numerous German wounded frozen to death in their beds.

Patch Reports Jap Army Wiped Out

War Sidelights

Chinese War Chief Confers With Wavell

New Delhi, India, Feb. 12 (AP).—The Chinese Minister of War, Gen. Ho Ying-ching, arrived today and was met by Field Marshal Sir Archibald P. Wavell, British commander in India.

His visit follows one of Field Marshal Sir John Dill, member of the joint British-American staff, and Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, U. S. Army air commander, to Chungking, where they consulted with him, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and his American chief of staff, Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stillwell.

The object of these conferences was to devise means of pressing home the attack on Japan with greater vigor and supplying China with more war supplies. Dill and Arnold conferred with Wavell before going to Chungking.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Allied commander of the Southwest Pacific, is expected to consult later with Wavell.

King Honors Chaplain

London, Feb. 12 (AP).—The Rev. Levi Gethin Hughes, deputy chaplain general of Great Britain's armed forces, was appointed today honorary chaplain to King George—the first Baptist minister ever to receive such an appointment.

Hughes has been an Army chaplain for 28 years. He served in France and Egypt during the last war.

70 Poles Executed

London, Feb. 12 (AP).—The Polish government in exile reported today that notice had been posted in Warsaw announcing the execution of 70 persons for "armed attacks against Germans." Because of the attacks, it said, a 7 p. m. curfew had been imposed until February 20, and the city fined 10 million zlotys, at prewar rates, about $1,600,000.

Legion Head Backs Ruml Tax Plan

out reducing Government revenue.

Representative Voorhis (Democrat) of California urged another approach—repealing the present Victory tax, starting pay-as-you-go collections on 1943 income, and paying off the tax for 1942 in 20 monthly installments. Repeal of the Victory tax would forgive an estimated five billion dollars a year, he said, whereas the proposed monthly installments would bring in six billion a year, or 10 billion in 20 months.

The committee suspended its pay-as-you-go studies until Monday, when a final open session was scheduled to take testimony from Colin F. Stam, chief of staff for the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, and from Randolph Paul, general counsel, and other Treasury officials. Executive sessions will follow.

At the same time, Chairman Doughton and other members said they hoped to reach a decision today, after a three-week deadlock, on legislation to raise the legal national debt limit from 125 to 210 billion dollars.

Tied to the debt question, as a result of a drive by committee members, is the question of whether to repeal or modify the President's order of last October fixing a $25,000 salary limit after taxes.

Confer on Strategy

Republican members conferred late yesterday on strategy for dealing with the salary limit and Representative Gearhart (Republican) of California, author of a bill to repeal the limit outright, said that his colleagues were still 100 per cent for getting rid of the salary limit.

Opposition to "doubling up" in tax payments and support for basic features of the Ruml plan was voiced by Arad Riggs, of the New York City Bar Association, and by David Vogels, housing contractor, in Saunderstown, R. I. Edgar Brown, director of the National Negro Council, and president of the United Government Employes, urged that employers of domestic workers be authorized to collect security and withholding taxes, as well as the present victory tax.

British Skipper Told Eisenhower Of Promotion

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Feb. 12 (AP).—This is how Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower learned he was entitled to wear four stars on each shoulde:

The news that he had been made a full general was announced in Washington and sent by cable to London, whence it was broadcast last night. The broadcast was heard here by the captain of a British naval vessel, who came ashore to telephone his congratulations to "Ike."

Next came a wireless message of congratulations form Mrs. Eisenhower. Then there was one from Prime Minister Churchill and another from Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff. Finally, early this morning, came the official notification.

Caught short of stars, Eisenhower had to borrow two from a spare tunic.

Foe Ejected From Guadalcanal After 6 Months, 2 Days

By the Associated Press

Guadalcanal, Feb. 9 (Delayed).—For the battle for Guadalcanal was "a campaign of destruction by ground forces supported by powerful artillery," Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, jr., said tonight with the announcement that the Japanese had been driven from this island.

"It was a matter of digging them out of the jungles and hills—fighting man to man," said the commander of the United States forces here.

"Technical advances have helped but again, as in other wars, there had to be close contact. Somebody had to kill somebody."

Totally Destroyed

Six months and two days following the American invasion of the island Major General Patch announced "the Japanese Seventeenth Army has been totally defeated and destroyed."

(Maj. Gen. Millard F. Harmon, commander of United States Army troops in the South Pacific, said yesterday at an advance base in the South Pacific that probably 2000 Japanese, including virtually every high officer, were evacuated from Guadalcanal the week before the Americans carried out their final operations.)

The end of the bitter struggle for control of this strategic Solomons Islands air base marked a clear-cut victory for the Americans over the Japanese.

Two Forces Converge

Two United States forces—one driving from the west and the other from the east—converged late today at Tenamba River, near the Japanese headquarters on Cape Esperance, closing the 9 miles which separated them yesterday.

Major General Patch said it was extremely difficult to count the number of enemy dead because of rapid decomposition and the difficulty of finding them.

Other sources estimated that 20,000 Japanese were killed in land action on Guadalcanal since August 7. It was estimated 1000 of the foe died in Guadalcanal waters during desperate attempts to reinforce the troops on the island.

(A United States Navy spokesman at an advance base in the South Pacific said two days ago that the Japanese had been driven from Guadalcanal with losses of between 30,000 and 50,000 men.)

Gives Credit to Spragins

Patch gave much of the credit for successful planning of the campaign to his chief of staff, Brig. Gen. Robert Spragins of Huntsville, Ala.

The victory came as a result of a tremendous encircling movement over extremely difficult terrain which the enemy didn't think the Americans could cross.

But after the capture of Mount Austen, which was taken heroically in a bitter battle by an Illinois unit, the Army forces drove to the southwest in an encircling movement beginning January 10.

This was the beginning of the end for the Japanese.

foundland Tuesday night increased to 19 dead last night with the death of one of the injured, ferry command officials announced today.

Three of the dead were Americans: F. A. Dugan, a captain navigator in the R. C. A. F., of New Orleans, La.; R. M. Lloyd, a captain in the R. C. A. F., of Hollywood, Calif., and J. Stagner, an R. C. A. F. captain navigator, of Dallas, Tex.

Dugan, formerly with the Delta Airlines in the United States, was said to have broken all records last year for flying the Atlantic with freight, diplomatic mail and Government-sponsored passengers by making five trips within nine days.

There were two survivors, both of them service personnel. They escaped without injury.

The dead included the aircraft's five-man crew and 14 passengers, of whom 13 were ferry command personnel returning to this continent to ferry aircraft back to Britain. The other passenger was a member of the British army.

A limitation of 2⅝ inches was put on the height of the heels on women's shoes, using size 4-B as the standard; in other words larger footsizes would have slightly higher heels. Platform soles and platform effects were forbidden for all footwear having a heel height of more than 1⅝ inches.

Among the furbelows ruled out were kiltie tongues, if made of leather; such trimmings as pin tuckings, fancy overlaps, and lacings; leather bows, and rawhide or other leather laces on street shoes. Women's gold or silver colored satin or brocade evening slippers were banned for the duration.

create public sentiment for farm prices high enough to "enable farmers to hire labor needed to produce food to feed this Nation."

The 48-hour week ordered by President Roosevelt, he declared, will tend to complicate rather than aid the farm labor problem.

"The 30 per cent increase in an industrial worker's wages by reason of the eight additional hours will broaden the discrepancy between industrial and farm wages. In most cases the increase alone will involve more money than the average farmer can pay his labor . . .

"Farm prices must be permitted to rise, farm machinery must be made available, and workers must be diverted to agricultural areas if we are going to produce food for ourselves and our allies."

Meanwhile, working to lessen pressure for producer price advances in milk, the Office of Price Administration set a price ceiling of $20 a short ton on alfalfa hay in California, Oregon and Washington.

OPA said alfalfa prices had climbed well above parity levels in those States and that the OPA action would keep down feed costs to livestock raisers. Ceilings will be established elsewhere as needed, it was declared.

Meat Quota May Be Under 2 Pounds Weekly

The Government expects to take steps within a few days to require packers and processors to reserve greater portions of their output of pork and lard for Government war needs, officials said yesterday.

A food official, who asked that his name not be published, said military procurement agencies and lend-lease buyers were experiencing great difficulty in securing sufficient meat and lard for their current and reserve requirements.

Stating that the meat supply situation had deteriorated since the Government had decided to ration civilians, the officials said the amount consumers will receive may be less than two pounds a week, on a percapita basis. Originally, officials had hoped to make the equivalent of about two and a half pounds available.

the world—in actions rather than in words—that the Casablanca Conference produced plenty of news; and it will be bad news for the Germans and Italians—and the Japanese."

Tunisia, he said, will witness one of the major battles of this war. The enemy's purpose was, he said, to hold this bridgehead in Africa and prevent us fror getting at Nazi-dominated Europe; ours was to "drive our enemies into the sea."

"The Battle of Tunisia," Mr. Roosevelt continued, "will cost us heavily in casualties. We must face that fact now, with the same calm courage as our men are facing it on the battlefield itself . . ."

President Roosevelt, like the newspapermen and other guests at the Statler last night, wore a business suit. And like the others he ate without the benefit of coffee, sugar, butter, beef or other rationed or shortage foods.

The menu was based on a typical Army meal: Bean soup, boiled flounder, roast chicken with potatoes and peas, a green salad and fig pudding.

Navy Band Plays

The entertainment program was furnished by the Columbia Broadcasting System and the United States Navy Band, directed by Lieut. Charles Brendler.

Douglas B. Cornell of the Associated Press, retiring president of the Whtie House Correspondents Association, presided and introduced President Roosevelt over the air. Paul Wooton of the New Orleans Times Picayune and McGraw-Hill Publications was inaugurated as the new president of the association immediately after Mr. Roosevelt's address. Taking office with Wooton were Merriman Smith of the United Press, as vice president, and Fred Pasley of the New York Daily News as secretary-treasurer. New executive committee members inducted were William H. Lawrence of the New York Times, Bert Andrews of the New York Herald Tribune and Garnett D. Horner of the Washington Star.

Wooton was elevated to the presidency of the association after serving a number of terms as secretary-treasurer. Members of the retiring executive committee included James M. Minifie of the New York Herald Tribune, Pasley and Smith.

A company of outstanding entertainers from radio and stage shows was brought to Washington by CBS especially for the party. Mr. Roosevelt and other guests saw an all-star program which included Virginia Austin and Jack Curtis, two of the Nation's top puppeteers; singer Joan Edwards of radio fame; the comedy ballroom dance team, Paul and Grace Hartman; Beatrice Kay, singer of old "gay 90s" songs; Jimmy Barton, with a comedy act; Dave Appolon and his musical comedy show, and a 20-piece CBS orchestra directed by Walter Gross.

George H. O'Connor, Washington business executive and long-time honorary member of the association, sang a medley of Irish songs for which he has become famous during the 20 White House Correspondents Association dinners at which he has sung.

There were no guests this year outside of working newspapermen and editors and representatives of official Washington, including Cabinet members, agency heads and top-ranking officers of the armed services. Among the newspaper out-of-town guests were members of the American Society of Newspaper Editor, which was meeting here to discuss wartime problems.

All guests, including the President himself, paid for their tickets. Funds raised in this manner will be turned over to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, which has been so closely identified with Mr. Roosevelt through its annual series of President's birthday balls. This marked the first time the White House Correspondents Association ever had given a benefit.

The affair was scheduled originally for January 27 to coincide with the Nation-wide observance of the President's birthday on January 30, but was postponed because of his then-secret conferences with Prime Minister Winston Churchill at Casablanca.

McNutt Manpower Policy Hit

rationing and have given no consideration to it, but the surest way to bring it on is a continuation of the runs. There are not any figures to indicate the need for rationing at the present time."

Frank L. Walton, director of the WPB textile, clothing and leather division, stated that there are adequate supplies of clothing and other apparel in inventories of both wholesalers and retailers.

"Production of clothes and apparel in 1942 was 5 per cent greater than 1939, our last normal peacetime year," Walton said.

"If the public will only buy its normal needs, and if the retail clothing stores will cooperate with their Government in discouraging hoarding or unnecessary buying of clothing, the supplies on hand will meet every need."

Nelson said he told the committee that WMC figures indicated it would be necessary to put 1.8 million workers in munitions production in 1943, with 400,000 to 500,000 additional going into essential civilian activities. In order to do these things and provide for the needs of the armed forces, the figures indicate the need to withdraw 3.2 million workers who are supplying civilian goods and services, Nelson said.

Weiner's main attack on McNutt's policies was that WMC has failed to provide any protection for the basic "core of essentiality" in most civilian activities which are needed to prevent a breakdown in war production. He pointed out as an example that absenteeism by women from war production jobs rose in areas where laundry and restaurant service are inadequate.

The director of the Office of Civilian Supply, which is a division of the War Production Board, urged McNutt to develop a policy of "total recruitment" to provide workers for the "essential core" of civilian activities as well as for direct war production. He suggested that the minimum essential manpower requirements for non-essential activities be determined before drawing off manpower.

After minimum essential manpower levels are determined, industry by industry, Weiner suggested that McNutt proceed to draw off the surplus manpower in successive waves, concentrating the "essential core" of each industry away from war production centers wherever possible.

Weiner said the present state of civilian industry indicated a necessity for him to act as its protector and public advocate.

In his report, Weiner stated that required war production will be forthcoming "only if we maintain civilian activities in the many ways and at the various levels necessary to keep our war production moving ahead."

Most-Honored U. S. Air Unit Broken Up

By J. B. Krueger
Associated Press Staff Writer

Pyote, Tex., Feb. 12 (AP).—America's most honored unit of fighting airmen, the Nineteenth Bomb Group, broke up today for a new war assignment.

Every man and officer of the Nineteenth was officially proclaimed a hero.

On the runway of "Rattlesnake" bomber base this morning, Maj. Gen. Robert Olds and his aides presented the Nineteenth's men an inch-long blue cloth bar, encrusted with gold laurel leaf.

This bar was a token for the four unit citations the group had achieved in a year of fierce battling with the Japanese from the Philippines to Java, Australia, Milne Bay, New Britain and the Solomons.

More than a thousand men and officers lined up on the field and heard General Olds, who commands the Second Air Force, welcome them into his command as instructors for newer men.

"We need your experience," he told them.

He pinned four silk streamers to the Nineteenth's blue flag. Each streamer denoted a phase of the unit's long, hard fight against Japan from the very day war began.

Staff Sergt. Kenneth Gradle, 22, of St. Louis, Mo., received another decoration. The addition of the blue bar brought his collection of metals to nine—including the Distinguished Flying Cross with Oak Leaf cluster, the most of any United States enlisted man in the war.

Gradle was on the plane which flew Gen. Douglas MacArthur to Australia, he has shot down at least six Jap Zeros, and he was wounded twice.

There are four squadrons in the Nineteenth—the Twenty-eighth, Thirtieth, Ninety-third and 435th. The ceremony today marked the end of their work together.

Many of the men go to new stations to teach other youngsters how to fly and fight bombers.

The group, as an organization, remains headquartered here, but most of the men who made it famous no longer will be together—men like First Lieut. Cecil E. Gregg of Dequeen, Ark., with the Silver Star with Oak Leaf cluster, D. F. C., Airman's Medal and the Blue Bar.

Or Maj. Frank P. Bostrom of Bangor, Me., who flew MacArthur out of the Philippines.

Contractor Indicted in Army Fraud

Attorney General Biddle announced yesterday that a Federal grand jury at Kansas City, Mo., has indicted Baker-Lockwood Manufacturing Co., Inc., of North Kansas City and four persons on a charge of conspiring to defraud on contracts involving more than seven million dollars for the aircraft accessories used at the Army's Wright Field near Dayton, Ohio.

The individuals indicted, Biddle said, are W. L. Mellor, president, and Dahne W. Winebrenner, general manager of Baker-Lockwood; Ben D. Christian, president of Safway Steel Products Co., Milwaukee, and Cornelius G. Loose, a civilian, principal administrative officer in the general procurement branch of the contract section, Materiel Center, Wright Field.

The Attorney General said the indictment was under a law which provides a maximum penalty of two years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine.

The Justice Department said that the alleged conspiracy involved charges of a representation by Winebrenner to companies seeking Government contracts for various types of shelters that Loose would refuse to approve the contracts for such equipment and would cancel recommendations on such prime contracts unless Baker-Lockwood was made sub-contractor for the canvas covering and canvas accessories of the shelters.

For taking such action, the Department statement said, Loose would be given money and other presents, under the guise of winning in games of chance."

It is charged also, the Department said, that Winebrenner quoted a low unit price for the canvas portion of the shelter to the Safway Co. and "substantially higher unit prices to other companies for similar material in order to prevent the latter from obtaining prime contracts."

Corporal Absolved In Soldier's Death

San Diego, Calif., Feb. 12 (AP).—Adam T. Weidert, 23, Marine corporal from New Orleans, was absolved by a coroner's jury today of criminal blame in connection with the death of Robert F. Smith, 30, Army corporal from Jamaica, N. Y., last Saturday.

Smith died of a broken neck. E. A. Turner, coroner's deputy, said testimony disclosed Weidert struck Smith when he saw the soldier put his arms around a nurse, unaware Smith was acquainted with the girl.

WLB Upholds Closed Shop For Duration

By Joseph A. Loftus
Associated Press Staff Writer

The War Labor Board yesterday laid down the dictum "that, as a general rule, a regularly-established union shop or closed shop shall remain regularly established for the duration of the war."

The decision, with employer members dissenting, was issued in the case of the Harvill Aircraft Die Corp., Inglewood, Calif., and the C. I. O. National Association of Die Casting Workers.

An agreement providing for a union shop there, requiring all workers to be union members, expired last April 15. The company refused to renew that provision and the case came before the WLB.

Board Takes Blame

Dr. Frank P. Graham, public member, said in the majority opinion that the board, by delaying settlement of the case, must share part of the responsibility for the fact that since April 15 new workers have become employed "without the knowledge or acceptance of the conditions of the union shop."

"The board, consequently," he said, "finds in conflict two of its basic policies in this case:

"First, that a worker shall not be compelled by the Government to join a union to get a job; and second, the herewith declared policy that a company cannot take advantage of the no-strike agreement to give up a union shop previously established by the agreement of the company and the union.

"It is the responsibility of the board to resolve this conflict in basic policies and yet make clear that, as a general rule, a regularly established union shop or closed shop shall remain regularly established for the duration of the war."

The board ordered the union ship and check-off restored as of April 15 with the proviso that employes hired between that time and the date of the order shall be subject only to the board's standard maintenance of membership provision—that is, if they are not union members they need not join and if they already have joined they have 15 days to withdraw if they wish; but otherwise they must pay their union dues and remain in good standing. However, future employes must observe the usual union shop conditions and join the union.

This exemption of the so-called "interim employes" from the union shop provisions will not be allowed in any future cases.

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 12 (AP).—Union counsel indicated today that it would appeal a circuit court ruling which invalidated closed shop agreements between the Tampa Shipbuilding Co. and 14 A. F. L. unions for the duration of the war. The unions represent approximately 12,000 workers.

Judge L. L. Parks ruled yesterday the contracts were against public policy at a time when "all sacrifices and suffering on the part of our citizens are willingly made in order that the young men at the front may be better prepared to cope with the enemy."

Shortage Seen In Hospitals For Wounded

Preparations to care for one million war-wounded must be made in America, Maury Maverick, director of the Governmental Division of the War Production Board, warned members of the American Hospital Association meeting in Chicago yesterday.

Maverick called for an immediate national survey to find quarters for the anticipated influx of casualties. Asserting it would be impossible to build enough hospitals, Maverick said "we must use all kinds of buildings that can be adapted to such use."

"This," he continued, "will include seaside resorts, mountain homes, dude ranches, office buildings, spas, fishing lodges, factories, ski lodges—and it must be on a large scale."

The total number of military beds in this country is 324,655, which are now substantially occupied, the WPB chief said.

James A. Hamilton, association president, reported at the meeting nurses would have to be rationed unless there was a substantial increase in the number trained by nursing schools. He urged the training of thousands more Red Cross volunteer nurses' aides.

Miss Alma C. Haupt, executive secretary of the nursing subcommittee of the Defense Health and Welfare Service, said the War Manpower Commission would establish an agency for nurses to function along the lines of procurement and assignment service for doctors. She predicted a shortage of 76,000 nurses in this country.

Ickes Sees Congress Irked By Dies' 'Despicable Tactics'

Chicago, Feb. 12 (AP).—Secretary of the Interior Ickes asserted tonight that there had been a "revolt in Congress against the despicable tactics" of Chairman Martin Dies of the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Discussing the Dies investigations, for which the House voted a two-year extension this week, Ickes said the committee chairman had asked the Representatives to "smite down" 38 Government employes whose backgrounds he questioned, but that "Congress voted against the legislative lynching of human beings without trial or proof."

He stated he felt that Dies "will never again stride quite so lustily and balefully across the stage, shooting at clay pigeons," because the Congress had "given evidence that it will not be roused to lynch law, even by Judge Lynch himself come to life."

In an address prepared for a meeting honoring George W. Norris, Nebraska independent, whose 30 years in the United States Senate were ended by his defeat in last fall's election, Ickes said:

"About 10 days ago, Mr. Dies . . . put on his annual melodrama. Hissing through his teeth, rending the air with blood-curdling yelps, freezing the very marrow of our bones with his tales of fearsome, ferocious Government clerks who read the New Republic, he called upon the great Congress of the United States to smite them down—all 38 on his list. . . .

"I cannot adequately express my profound gratitude to the members of the House of Representatives who resolutely refused to allow themselves to be stampeded by Mr. Dies' appeal to strike down 38 people who had never been heard, indicted, tried or convicted."

The Secretary said it developed that Dies wanted more money "for that shadow of a committee which never meets and is never consulted."

"Mr. Dies has already gotten $495,000 . . .," Ickes said. "It has been used in character assassination of anyone whom Mr. Dies suspects of believing that Government should promote the welfare of the people."

He said Dies used to call Administration officials Communists, had shifted to the term "crackpot," but still was out to "crush the tiniest spark of liberalism or tolerance that may flicker before his bloodshot eyes."

"People whom Dies has pilloried can generally prove they're not Communists," Ickes added. "But how can anybody prove he's not a 'crackpot'?"

The Secretary said it was fitting on the anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's birth to "compare the humane philosophy of George Norris with the buffooneries of those Fascist-minded bubble dancers whose names have lately been making front-page news."

Lutherans Top Mission Work Quota

Workers from local and nearby Lutheran churches rejoiced last night as the annual financial drive of the Washington Lutheran Inner Mission Society went "over the top" by $300.

A total of $7000 was reported at the dinner in Reformation Lutheran Church, 212 East Capitol Street, climaxing the three weeks' campaign among Lutheran congregations of several synods here. Dr. James Oosterling, executive secretary of the Baltimore Inner Mission Society, was the principal speaker.

Dr. J. Harold Mumper, president of the Inner Mission Board, and pastor of Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, presided. Among other participants were Lloyd Nelson of Luther Place Memorial Church, drive chairman, and Miss Frances Dysinger, Inner Mission Society executive secretary.

Houdini's Widow Dies

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 12. — Mrs. Beatrice Houdini, 69, has passed into the realm from which she waited 10 years in vain for a spirit message from her husband, the famous Harry Houdini.

Death came last night aboard a train at Needles, Calif., a few hours after she left here for her New York home, said a message to U. L. DI Chitini, a friend.

Mrs. Houdini, in an interview February 4 from her bed in a rest home, disclosed that she had grown to doubt immortality, and that she long ago gave up hope of communication after death.

"Whoever says they have communicated with my spirit after my death will be lying," she declared. "I will not come back, even if I have the power."

For 10 years she held seances on the anniversary of his death. The final seance was held in 1936, after which she abandoned efforts to communicate with him.

Clothing Stampede

Tuesday's stampede to the retail clothing shops as a result of an unfounded rumor that clothes rationing would follow the rationing of shoes was a rather disgraceful episode. It is, of course, an open question whether the Office of Price Administration, in announcing the shoe rationing, might not have anticipated a run on the clothing shops and averted it by some such announcement as was later made by Messrs. Nelson and Brown. But the run was natural and even logical. The psychology of a people cannot be changed overnight, war or no war, and the principle of the sort of things classified only yesterday as "initiative" and "enterprise" are too deeply ingrained to disappear merely because the country is at war.

The root of the matter is that people will not become virtuous and unselfish or even reasonable merely because the Government instructs them to be so. Nor can they be forced into virtue by executive decree, not even when the decree is supported by an elaborate police system. To some extent this refusal of people to be virtuous or even reasonable explains the rather familiar historical phenomenon called "the terror." But even terror has been in the long run ineffectual, as witness the failure of the French Revolutionary terror to enforce the system of price fixing. We have all seen that the inauguration of rationing programs is almost automatically followed by the appearance of "black markets" in the rationed commodities.

The fault lies not so much in the system as in human nature itself. Unselfishness is after all a moral quality and follows a certain moral enlightenment on the part of an individual. And this sort of enlightenment bureaucrats and official propagandists are not capable of giving us en masse. They can help to bring out our moral quality, of course, by example and by leadership. They can help to potentize it, too, by such methods as sending our battle-scarred veterans on tours of the factories, where absenteeism is just as disgraceful as the run on clothing. That enough has not been done in either respect seems the conclusion from such exhibitions, even though the fault is in ourselves.

Trust Buster

Thurman Arnold's energetic campaign against monopolies has won for him widespread respect and no little admiration. Of course, he also earned the animosity of some groups whose special privileges he challenged, but most of that ill will is a testimony to his diligence in pursuit of his ideal of industrial democracy. Probably he made a good many mistakes, but his administration of the Antitrust Division will long be remembered for its vigor, courage, independence and very substantial achievements.

In peacetime Mr. Arnold probably would not have accepted a nomination to the bench, even though it may be regarded as a promotion. But the war has necessarily interrupted his career as a "trust buster." With much of the activity of his division suspended for the duration, he is understandably eager to enter a new field where his many talents and his boundless energy can be more usefully employed. No doubt he will have such an opportunity as a member of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. Certainly he has earned this promotion. We do not suppose for a moment, however, that he will find in reviewing legal cases the stimulus that he found in prosecuting trusts, monopolies and racketeers.

Whether the nomination of Mr. Arnold is desirable from the viewpoint of the Court of Appeals, however, is another question. When he ascends the bench, it will be composed of the chief justice, a former member of Congress and four former assistants to the Attorney General. All of these men are capable; some are brilliant jurists. Yet the reservation of judicial posts for men who have represented the Government in the Department of Justice leaves much to be desired. Mr. Arnold will probably be as fearless and independent on the bench as he has been in the Antitrust Division. Still the basic objection to overloading the courts with men straight from the executive departments remains. And, of course, this nomination still leaves the District of Columbia without a single representative on its court of last resort.

Toward A Clash

Four times during the last week the House has manifested its resentment over the growing power of executive agencies. It gave a new lease on life to the Dies Committee, despite criticism of the committee's bungling methods, largely because Mr. Dies is a thorn in the flesh of the Administration. It set up an Appropriations Subcommittee under Representative Kerr as a means of cutting "subversive" employes off the Federal payroll. On Thursday it authorized the Appropriations Committee to conduct sweeping investigations into the operations of all bureaus, departments, and so forth, in the interest of economy and efficiency. And it adopted the sweeping Smith resolution carrying authority to put any administrator on the gridiron at any time.

Obviously the Houre has the bit in its teeth. It is determined to recapture the prestige and power that Congress has lost in recent years. That is not a partisan aim. The Smith resolution, for example, was adopted by a vote of 294 to 50. Democrats and Republicans alike are smarting under the contempt of many administrative agencies for legislative authority. In this mood they are not content to reassert their own powers and legislate on their own responsibility. They are striking at bureaucracy with a broad sweeping motion, with few more scruples about keeping within their own sphere of action than the bureaucrats themselves have manifested.

There is, of course, an urgent need for scrutiny of the budgets and operations of far-flung executive units, many of which have been set up by order of the President. Congress certainly needs an expert staff to keep it informed as to what these agencies are doing and how they are spending their appropriations. It is foolish to rely upon each bureau's own estimates of its requirements when everyone knows that the foremost aim of most bureau chiefs is to enlarge their organization so as to puff up their own prestige. Here, then, is a constructive step toward greater congressional responsibility, although the job could be done much more satisfactorily by a joint Senate and House committee than by a group reporting to the House alone.

Certainly Congress should also be examining and checking the stream of administrative orders that now regulate the lives of the people. Some of these orders have no legislative backing. Others appear to have been issued in defiance of legislation. Congress faces the alternative of reasserting its powers or of giving way to executive supremacy. But it can assert its will, it can restrain the usurpation of legislative powers, without launching fishing expeditions that may interfere with legitimate and essential executive functions.

The Kerr Committee cannot carry out its assignment without treading on executive toes, for the appointive power belongs to the President. If the House attempts to sit in judgment on Federal personnel, it will entrench upon administrative power no less seriously than some administrators are entrenching upon legislative power. The Smith resolution again instructs roving investigators to submit to Congress recommendations with respect to personnel of the executive agencies. That can lead to no end of trouble.

No gift of perspicacity is necessary to see the present trend is toward a clash between Congress and the President over their respective powers. The result might easily be a calamity in wartime. The national interest clearly demands a retreat from encroachments by both sides. And since the Administration has been by far the most flagrant offender to date, it might well lead the way toward a better understanding by modifying orders of dubious legality and asking for legislation in those fields where it is now trying to impose far-reaching policies without legislative backing.

Garden Variety

There's a new book just out which has nothing to do with the war, with present world conditions, with economics, or even with love. Executed in the finest tradition of objective writing, it is utterly without pretensions to style or technique. No reviewer can ever accuse its author of having followed in the footsteps of Joyce or Hemingway. There is no likelihood of its being named the book of the month, but that will not keep it from being read by hundreds of thousands of people. Its only plot is the one on the jacket—and a very well-tended plot it is with "deep, springy long-lasting turf." This new book is the 1943 seed catalogue!

No doubt Margaret Mitchell will be surprised to find Scarlett O'Hara described in this book as "deep rosy crimson in color." Where the original Scarlett's waist measured 17 inches, her floral namesake has a petal spread of only 4 inches. The Veronica mentioned on page 51 is not of the Hollywood species, but a "creeping variety suitable for rock gardens." Nor does the "Jane Cowl" to be found on page 53 have her roots in the theater. According to the seed catalogue, Jane Cowl is a decorative dahlia "with a leathery foliage that insects do not like." How posies, like politics, make strange bedfellows! In the world of sweet peas, "Mrs. Herbert Hoover" mingles democratically with "Captain Blood" and a "frilled and fluted Shirley Temple." "Princess Victoria Louise" and "Lord Beaconsfield, Improved," are not above mingling with "Viola, the Jersey Gem." They all look alike in shaded frames.

To the initiate the most fascinating part of any seed catalogue is that which contains the information on garden tools. So far as the beginner is concerned, a hoe is simply a hoe. Naivete of this sort, however, is heresy to the veteran gardener who cannot work without a handy hoe, a garden hoe, a grub hoe, a weeding hoe and an all-purpose hoe! But whether you know the difference between a Wiss-Klip Automatic and a Dooklip doesn't matter. The important thing this spring is that you roll up your sleeves, get in their and dibble.

Time And A Half

Defenders of the Administration's labor policies have stubbornly maintained that the Wage-Hour Law does not interfere with our war effort because the law sets no fixed limit to working hours. The fallaciousness of this argument has been revealed by the dismay caused by issuance of the 48-hour executive order coupling an extension of work beyond 40 hours with payment of time-and-a-half rates for overtime work. For many nonwar industries operating under price ceilings, the additional labor costs resulting from compliance with this order would be prohibitive. In any case, widespread protests clearly indicate that the time-and-a-half pay-rate provisions of the existing law have deterred many employers from lengthening their working week, despite developing labor shortages. It has become necessary, therefore, for the Government to intervene to insure more effective utilization of the existing labor supply. However, instead of seeking modification of the Wage-Hour Law to encourage longer hours of work, the Administration has by decree undertaken to extend the system of punitive overtime rates to all industries in districts having a shortage of labor.

So long as the time-and-a-half rates of pay were confined largely to war industries, additions to production costs caused by overtime work beyond 40 hours could be shifted to the Government in the form of higher charges. But small business firms and retailers supplying civilian needs have no such recourse. If they are unable to pay their employes 30 per cent higher wages to work 20 per cent more hours weekly, they are out of luck. As Representative Ramspeck points out, hardship cases can be taken care of in just three ways: (1) by raising ceiling prices for goods, (2) by subsidizing distressed concerns; (3) by adjusting overtime rates of pay. The first relief proposal is "out," we hope, since it would entail widespread advances in prices of civilian goods, thus giving another twist to the inflationary upward spiraling of wages and living costs. The second suggestion—subsidization of firms caught between rising labor costs and fixed-price ceilings—would increase Government expenditures and further inflate the volume of purchasing power in the hands of the people. The third relief proposal—modification of the overtime-pay-rate system—offers the only feasible method of lengthening the working week without adding to the existing inflationary pressure or forcing a lot of concerns out of business.

Again we have to look facts in the face, and admit that efforts to eliminate existing time-and-a-half overtime pay in negotiated wage agreements is impracticable at this late date. But it is not too late to prevent mandatory extension of the system to industries in which overtime work is at present nonexistent or limited in amount. Remuneration at regular hourly rates for overtime would mean generous additions to individual payrolls without accompanying additions to labor costs that would throw our system of regulated prices out of gear and reduce the purchasing power of the wage earner's dollar. Suspension of the overtime provisions of the Wage-Hour Act for the duration of the war would at least give employers some latitude in adjusting payments for overtime in accordance with their ability to pay. The executive decree, on the other hand, would deprive them of all discretion in the matter. They would either have to conform or go out of business. That is certainly not the way to mobilize our manpower most effectively for the better prosecution of the war.

CONVOY AT NIGHT

The lean gray ships are the shepherds of the deep,
Out in the darkness, harrying, coaxing their sheep.
Salt-eyed, wary men
Stare into the murk,
Leap to action, when a shining fin
Breaks water. Ships and men, their own deaths lurk
Where the steel wolves sleep.

Sailing above the wreckage of old wars,
Crusted hull and rib and tangled spars
Dark in the darker depths, beneath
The tumble of moonless water. Give them light,
Orion, and silver the bone in their teeth,
As they trace uncharted furrows in the night
By the blossoming stars.

Argentine Neutrality

By Virginia Prewett

Beginning Of The End?

AN EVENT of outstanding significance has occurred in Argentina—there has come the first hint of the answer to the question that has hung over this nation ever since the Rio Conference.

Ever since the Castillo government began to show its firm intention to keep Argentina an isolationist nation, the question has been: From what direction could come the pressure that would force a change in their position?

One of the strictest practices of the Good Neighbor policy, which has been United States foreign policy since 1933, is that this country has completely forsworn intervention in the external or internal political affairs of the Latin American nations. Since adopting this policy we have time and again proved that we will not use pressure tactics. This has been strictly observed toward Argentina. The United States, Britain, Brazil and Hispanic-American nations, among them Argentina's neighbor, Uruguay, have clearly indicated their disapproval of the Castillo stand, but no reprisals, either political or economic, have been taken.

No Automatic Pressure

During the last year this writer has time and again checked on Argentina's economic situation to see if her non-cooperative stand might not automatically bring to her certain impelling economic pressures. We have no lease-lend agreement with her, and she does not come within inter-American cooperative arrangements to meet rubber, fuel and food emergencies. But Argentina produces more than enough food for her people and at present comes far nearer supplying her own gasoline, fuel and tire needs than any other Latin American country. She stockpiled steel, rubber, chemicals and other supplies before the war. Her meat, wheat and other farm exports are vitally needed by the United Nations and they are buying them. Argentina has not run into any automatic economic pressures as result of her isolationism. The fact is that, even if the anti-Axis nations were disposed to take economic reprisals, which they are not, Argentina could weather them.

Possibilities for Argentina's liberal parties, which admittedly represent the popular majority, to break the political impasse have not seemed bright. The party in power can keep itself in office indefinitely through various election-control devices if it wants to. This election control, called "patriotic fraud" by the factions that practice it, is nothing new in Argentina.

There has remained the avenue of popular rebellion, but a disorder of this kind is the last thing anybody but the Axis wants in this hemisphere now. Conservative army strength would quickly crush any such rebellion, anyhow.

Until a few days ago, the situation has seemed a complete deadlock. On February 5, however, a major break came when National Deputy Justo V. Rocha wrote Senator Gilberto Suarez Lago a long open letter strongly condemning Castillo's policy. This letter is of paramount significance because the writer is not only chairman of the Chamber of Deputies Foreign Affairs Committee but also a leading conservative, while the man to whom it was written is chairman of both the national Conservative party and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Rocha demanded to know where Castillo was leading Argentina. "The flag of neutrality is not an emblem of peace," he wrote, "nor does it justify a middle course. It indicates in this important matter of foreign policy the general tendency of a government which acts without taking public opinion into consideration." Rocha said further that if it were not for the men who are today fighting "Nazi barbarism and brutality," Argentina would see the swastika in her own streets.

Dr. Carlos Cisneros, Argentine national deputy and outstanding opposition leader who is now visiting the United States, pointed out to this writer in discussing the Rocha letter Monday that Senator Suarez Lago has himself publicly attacked the Castillo policy in recent months. In the opinion of Dr. Cisneros, who Wednesday issued a strong demand for the Castillo government to abandon its "erroneous" stand, there is little doubt that Rocha and Suarez Lago were in previous agreement on the open letter.

May Start Political Rebellion

Argentina elects a new President this fall and the Rocha-Suarez Lago letter can be taken as the opening move of a political rebellion against the Castillo clique by powerful elements of the Conservative party itself.

This rebellion, aimed at Castillo's autocratic disregard of Argentine public opinion as well as his isolationism, shows that his policies are beginning to fall by their own weight. Realization that when a small clique within the government goes against the will of the majority Argentina is on the road away from free government is the pressure that is at last reaching into the citadel of Argentine conservatism.

It may be some time before a change will result from this. But when it does come, Argentina will at last have an effective democratic government and the majority sentiment in favor of international cooperation can find expression. When this is so, she can earn the confidence of the nations that are fighting the war and laying foundations for the peace and can work for her proper place among them. It would be the soundest and best solution for an unfortunate situation that could be envisaged.

The New "Realists"

By Barnet Nover

Self-Interest And National Policy

MR. SUMNER WELLES, our very able Undersecretary of State, must be more than a little surprised, and probably a good deal less than altogether pleased, at the enthusiastic approval given in some quarters to one passage in his recent University of Maryland speech.

In that speech Mr. Welles said: "It can never be made too clear, nor reiterated too often, that the foreign policy of the people of the United States, exactly like their domestic policies, should only be determined from the standpoint of what the American people believe is their real, their practical, self-interest. Our foreign policy must not be—and in the long run never will be—based upon emotional altruism nor sentimental aspiration."

THIS STATEMENT has been hailed by some prewar isolationists as a sign that the Roosevelt Administration is now backtracking from internationalism and by others, notably Representative Clare Boothe Luce, as justification for a policy of latter-day imperialism based on American command of the skies.

As an ardent Wilsonian who in a long succession of speeches has denounced both isolationism and imperialism, Mr. Welles would hardly approve either of these interpretations of his remarks.

In fact, in the closing sentence of the passage quoted above, Mr. Welles urged that "we should all of us be asking ourselves day in and day out . . . not only what policies this country should adopt after the war in order to make sure that our security and our best interests are safeguarded, but also what this country of ours could have done in the past in order to prevent, or at least to make less likely, the rise of the conditions which have permitted the outbreak of this great struggle in which we are now engaged."

ADDRESSING himself to that very question, Mr. Welles, in the same University of Maryland speech, declared that the failure of the United States to accept its responsibilities a generation ago helped the rise of the aggressors.

Who were the realists, who the sentimentalists in 1919?

Was Woodrow Wilson a sentimentalist in urging that the United States add its strength and prestige to a world order devoted to the preservation of peace, by force if necessary? Had we taken his advice we would not today be pouring out our blood and treasure in an effort to finish the job we left undone in 1918.

Was Henry Cabot Lodge a realist when he knifed the League of Nations? Events prove that by supporting the thesis that we could live by ourselves alone he was the crassest of sentimentalists. And having placed the United States on the road of isolation Lodge was inconsistent enough later to favor a policy of naval disarmament, and strongly supported the Washington treaties by which our fleet was cut down and placed in a straitjacket and we agreed not to build up the fortifications at Guam and the Philippines. The inevitable result was Pearl Harbor.

IT IS UNLIKELY that after this war we shall return to the isolationist course of 1919-1920. Such ghastly mistakes are not repeated, at least not twice in a generation. But if we avoid this time the isolation of inaction we may, if some have their way, embark on the isolation of imperialism.

In her maiden speech before Congress on February 9, Representative Clare Boothe Luce of Connecticut said some wise and many witty things. But her speech was also shot through with much confusion.

Thus she pins on our adherence to the concept of "freedom of the seas" our failure to build up an adequate merchant marine before the war. Yet there is not the slightest relation between the two. Freedom of the seas was a concept which applied primarily in time of war and, so far as it became an historic American policy, arose out of the circumstance that we were, during the first part of our history a great maritime nation which also regarded itself as a perennial neutral.

The concept was never challenged in time of peace; it was never accepted by any maritime nation—including the United States in 1917-18—actually engaged in war.

Our failure to build up a large merchant marine before this war was the result of our failure to understand the kind of a world we lived in. It was of a piece with our failure to build up an adequate air force, our complacent belief that we could safeguard peace through neutrality laws, our failure to take strong action against aggressors when the tide of aggression was only in its incipient stage.

Mrs. Luce urges that, as against a policy of "freedom of the air," we pursue, after the war, a policy of "sovereignty of the skies." What precisely this means, except that we are to bar the planes of other nations from flying over our territory, is not clear. But if we take such action we should not be surprised if others follow suit and, in reprisal, prevent us from flying over their territory.

The maintenance of American air supremacy would then depend on two factors—a vast expansion of internal air traffic which nobody could prevent us from carrying out anyway, and dominance over the air routes leading out from the United States to and over countries incapable of building up their own commercial air transport systems. And that would inevitably involve, if we pursued a lone-handed rather than a cooperative course, dominance over the land under the skies. Mrs. Luce's policy if adopted would thus engender a struggle for air fields comparable to the struggle for naval bases and coaling stations that was a very important part of the imperialistic movement of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Is that what we want?

Requisitioning Cars

The proposal to "requisition" seven million cars and all spare tires has been rightfully opposed and dismissed by Donald Nelson. Aside from the physical impracticability and general stupidity of the plan, it reveals a seriously un-American attitude on the part of some high officials.

No citizen has any "right" to scarce stocks of gasoline and rubber needed for the war effort—let us make this point clear at the outset. The calling in of all tires over five as a condition to the further receipt of gasoline supplies was a perfectly reasonable course of action. Further application of such a principle would be the logical procedure if more tires or cars were actually needed. Or, as an alternative, A books could be canceled and gas rationed only for specific, essential, movements. This would no doubt induce many people to sell their tires and/or cars, achieving the general purpose of the proposed confiscation.

There is quite a difference between the Government bargaining with its people and the issuing of arbitrary, irresponsible fiats.

Use Our Forces

Before we worry so much about equipping and feeding more than 10 millions in our Army and Navy, etc., would it not be well to put just a few more thousand of them at places where their mere presence, if nothing more, will be worth something? In order to give our men in the Solomons, especially, and in Tunisia, easier fighting and greater success, let us use some of our vast forces, concentrating them at strategic points.

48-Hour Week

If we are to win the war, avoid inflation, and produce, the New Deal will have to stop playing politics with labor unions and face the realistic fact that a laborer does not work for the fun of it but because he must work to exist, and believe it or not, the more money that is paid for unskilled or semiskilled labor per hour, the fewer hours the laborer will work to exist.

If the WMC wants to cut down on absenteeism and get more work done, it should not only freeze wages for labor, but should cut out time and one-half pay for hours in excess of 40 hours per week, so that labor will have to work 48 hours per week to exist.

The labor unions and reformers don't like this idea, but if this plan is adopted in all of the 31 labor shortage areas for a period of 90 days and a heavy hand is laid on the labor unions for that period to prevent strikes, the results will prove before the 90-day period is up just why a laborer labors and the manpower shortage will be relieved.

Slice For Victory

I am working in a retail bakery store. We used to slice most of the bread for our patrons. The first day after the law came into effect to stop slicing bread, many of the customers expressed their deepest regrets. They would be very happy to pay 1 cent more on every pound of bread in order to have it sliced. This is particularly true in cases where there are large families requiring the making of many sandwiches.

This gave me a wonderful idea. Even though I realize that the material being used for those machines is vital, use of those already constructed could be of greater benefit toward the war effort. From all those pennies, accumulating day by day from all over the country, could be evolved thousands of rounds of ammunition or other vital materials of greater importance toward winning the war.

Don't Mix Ages

Overseeing rooming houses and general observation has convinced me that you can't mix young and old people. The two won't mix, like oil and water. The younger person has a different viewpoint than the older person, and experience doesn't seem to matter. The young lady seems to think that her boy friends are the most important thing in her life and the young man thinks his girl friends are the most important things in his life. Their talk seems silly to the older person who has more mature matters to discuss. The younger person can do with a lot less sleep than an older person and, being thoughtless, makes noises and carries on in general to the distraction and sleeplessness of an older person. Being 52 myself sort of puts me on middle ground and I can see both sides and sympathize accordingly, I hope. The younger person looks on the oldster as an old fogey and the oldster looks on the youngster as a silly thing. I guess it will ever be thus, so the only solution, as I see it, is to keep them apart as much as possible.

Too High A Raise

Your editorial on the Government employes' pay raise was excellent. I, for one, heartily agree with you that a 30 per cent raise is entirely too high.

My observation as a Government employe is that a great majority of those in the Federal service are being paid plenty for the work they do, in fact, much more than they are worth or could get on the outside for the same line of work. Keep up your fight against this 30 per cent "grab" and also against overtime for 40 or 44 hours a week.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Epitaphs For Adolf

(Occasioned by recurrent rumors.)

Neath this urn
Der Fuehrer's planted;
It's just as well
For how he ranted!

* * * *

This man put faith in planes and bombs—
In ambush and the ruthless raid;
He trusted tanks and guns but in
The end it merely took a SPADE!

* * * *

Ashes to ashes
And dust to dust;
He finished last
Though starting "fust."

* * * *

The author of "Mein Kampf" lies here,
Beneath this sod his bones now rot;
The moral of this tale is this:
No author should have too much plot.

* * * *

Here A. Hitler
Now grows littler;
His words might glisten,
But worms don't listen.

* * * *

Stranger, pause as you pass by
And think about this Wonder Guy:
He talked with all his might and will;
Pass quickly, or you'll hear him still!

* * * *

Six foot of sod
He does not like:
For down that deep
There is no "mike."

* * * *

Reflect, O stranger, passing here—
All men are not what they appear;
Before each push he cried, "I'm God"—
But can't push through this little sod.

* * * *

This man a peaceful era picked
And told the world, "I can't be licked";
Now insects o'er this plot may buzz
And say in their strange tongue, "HE WAS!"

* * * *

Here lies a man who blasted states;
To topple cities was his whim.
He smiled as countless buildings fell
And then the whole world fell on HIM!

* * * *

Here is a casket holding one
Who was a leering, brutal fake;
When Satan looked within he cried
With loathing, "Opened by mistake!"

* * * *

Hitler may or may not be dead. But he certainly isn't feeling any too well.

There is still a question whether Ciano was dropped or thrown.

Some people think Der Fuehrer killed himself. But this seems unlikely, as he made no plans for shooting himself over an international network.

Song for the WAACS

You're in the Army now, you're in the Army now,
You're through with allure,
Of that you are sure—
You're in the Army now.

* * * *

You're in the Army now, you're in the Army now,
No cocktails for dinner—
You gotta get thinner,
You're in the Army now.

* * * *

You're now a WAAC, and how, from Marshall take a bow—
Your "hair-do" today
Needs Stimson's okay,
You're in the Army now.

* * * *

You're eating Army chow; unpenciled is your brow,
The Axis needs wrecking,
So down with all necking,
You're in the Army now.

The new ration book will have coupons of varying values in points from one to eight. It would be nice, thinks Mrs. Twitchell, if she could play her book with the deuces wild.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Crisis And Reform In Education

BEGINNING this month the lowering of the draft age to 18 will really take effect in the colleges. It will not be long before there will be no more able-bodied men students who recieve what is called a liberal or a general education. A certain proportion of them will still be found studying in the college buildings. But their studies will be those which the Army and Navy decide are needed to fit them to be officers and technicians in the armed forces. Therefore, it is generally taken for granted that for the duration of the war a liberal college education can be offered only to women and the physically unfit men.

LIPPMANN

Must it be taken for granted? The question has been raised by Mr. Stringfellow Barr, the president of St. John's College. The fact that he has raised the question, and his reasons for raising it, should at least interest parents and teachers throughout the country.

WE THINK we cannot give our able-bodied men a liberal education because on the average they enter college when they are 17½ years and the Army inducts them when they are 18. But, says Mr. Barr, why do we think that a student must be nearly 18 before he begins to study the liberal arts? Why do we so readily take it for granted that 15 would be too young if a suitable course of studies were set up by the colleges?

Is it because parents think 15 is too young for boys to have the social freedom of college life? That objection could easily be taken care of by college discipline. Or is it because the faculties think boys of 15 are intellectually unready for a college education? Mr. Barr, who is a teacher of long and wide experience, says he does not believe it, and to test his belief his college, St. John's, has announced that it will now admit boys after their second year in the high school.

THESE BOYS will be able to have a somewhat modified and shortened liberal education before they are called into the Army. Mr. Barr thinks that the college can make better use of the boy's time when he is 16 and 17 than the high schools now make of it. And it follows that if the high schools have to let go of the boy at 15, they might find ways of doing in three years what they now take four years to teach. And this might work back to the primary schools and induce them to do in seven or even in six years what they now do in eight.

THE PROOF of Mr. Barr's pudding will, of course, be in the eating. But there are very strong reasons for thinking that his experiment, which is an adjustment to the Draft Act, may start currents of thought which will have a permanent effect upon American education.

For nearly everyone is dissatisfied with the results of modern education, and increasingly men and women are beginning to feel that it has been teaching a little about too many things without teaching enough about anything. More specifically, the conviction is growing that the schools and colleges are very "liberal" in the sense that they offer innumerable courses on no end of subjects but that they are failing to educate their students efficiently in those disciplines which underly all the liberal arts —namely, in the ability to read with understanding, in the ability to write and speak so as to be understood, and in the ability to use figures.

THERE ARE many who are coming to feel that if the schools and colleges had to shorten their courses, they would be forced to improve them by concentrating on the fundamental disciplines. There would be less about the anthropology of the cavemen and the sociology of the Hottentots and the psychology of streetcar employes in Omaha. With less subjects and more attention to the elements of education, we might not be hearing from the training schools that so many college men cannot, as Mr. Barr reports their complaints, "read well enough or write well enough or handle simple mathematics well enough to make good officer material." And we should have a good deal less administrative trouble in Washington if those who write the directives had learned to say what they really mean, and if all those who read directives had learned to know what they had read.

SO WHAT we call the crisis in American education may prove to be a crisis, not in the sense of a disaster, but in the original sense of the Greek word from which it comes, which means "to decide." We may find ourselves perforce deciding on a reform of education. The inability to carry on liberal education as usual will cause a few colleges, like St. John's, to make interesting experiments which may radically alter the curriculum of studies. In others, as President Conant has said in his report to the Harvard Board of Overseers, there will be "a period of hibernation while we win this war," yet a period which "should provide an excellent opportunity for taking stock of our modern education problems."

Roosevelt Gives His Views on War At Correspondents Annual Dinner

President Cites War Aims, Reviews His Recent Trip

The text of President Roosevelt's address last night follows:

It is nearly two years since I attended the last dinner of the White House Correspondents Association. A great deal of water has flowed over the dam since then.

And several people have flown over the water.

Two years ago—many months before Pearl Harbor—I spoke to you of the thought that was then uppermost in our minds—of the determination of America to become the arsenal of democracy. Almost all Americans had by that time determined to play their full part in helping to save civilization from the barbarians. Even then, we were in the midst of the historic job of production—a job which the American people have been performing with zest and skill and, above all, success.

Tonight, as I speak to you, another thought is uppermost in our minds. That is our determination to fight this war through to the finish—to the day when United Nations' forces march in triumph through the streets of Berlin, Rome and Tokyo.

Last September I made a tour of inspection through this country. I saw war plants at work. I saw Army and Navy training camps and flying fields. I saw American men and women—management and labor alike—working to beat production schedules. I saw American soldiers and sailors and fliers doing the job of training for the fighting which lay ahead.

Now I have returned from one of the fronts overseas, where the production from American factories and the training given in American camps are being applied in actual warfare against the enemy. I have seen our troops in the field. I have inspected their superb equipment. I have talked and laughed and eaten with them.

I have seen our men—the Nation's men—in Trinidad, in Belem and Natal in Brazil, in Liberia, in Gambia. In these places there is no actual fighting, but there is hard, dangerous, essential work, and there is a tremendous strain upon the endurance and the spirit of our troops. They are standing up magnificently under that strain.

I have seen our men—and some of our American women—in North Africa. Out there is war. Those men know that before this war is over, many of them will have given their lives. But they know also that they are fighting to destroy the power of the enemies of their country—that they are fighting for a peace which will be a real and lasting peace and a far better world for the future.

Our men in the field are worthy of the great faith, the high hopes, we have placed in them. That applies as well to the men of our Navy, without whom no American expeditionary force could land safely on foreign shores. And it applies equally to the men of our merchant marine who carry essential munitions and supplies, without which neither the United States nor our Allies could continue the battle.

No American can look at these men, soldiers or sailors, without great emotion and great pride and a very deep sense of responsibility to them.

Because of the necessary secrecy of my trip, the men of our armed forces in every place I visited were completely surprised. The expression on their faces certainly showed it.

Yearns for Other Visits

I wish that I could pay similar surprise visits to our men in the other fields of operation—the naval bases, the islands of the Pacific, Australia, the mainland and islands of Alaska, the islands of the Atlantic, the two Guianas, the Canal Zone, Iceland, Britain, Central Africa, the Middle East, India, Burma and China. I wish I could tell them face to face that their Government and their people are very proud of the great job they are doing in helping to strengthen the vise that is slowly but surely squeezing the breath out of our enemies.

In every battalion and in every ship's crew you will find every kind of American citizen representing every occupation, every section, every origin, every religion, every political viewpoint.

Ask them what they are fighting for, and every one of them will say: "I am fighting for my country." Ask them what they really mean by that and you will get what, on the surface, may seem to be a wide variety of answers.

One will say he is fighting for the right to say what he pleases and to read and listen to what he likes.

Another will say he is fighting because he never wants to see the Nazi swastika flying over the First Baptist Church on Elm Street.

Another soldier will say he is fighting for the right to work and earn three square meals a day for himself and his folks.

A fourth soldier will say he is fighting in this world war so that his children and grandchildren will not have to go back to Europe, or Africa or Asia to do this ugly job all over again.

Many Answers, One Reason

But all these answers really add up to the same thing: Every American fights for freedom. And today the personal freedom of every American and his family depends, and in the future will increasingly depend, upon the freedom of his neighbors in other lands.

For today the whole world is one neighborhood. That is why this war, which had its beginnings in seemingly remote areas, has spread to every continent and most of the islands of the sea, involving the lives and the liberties of the entire human race. And unless the peace that follows recognizes that the whole world is one neighborhood and does justice to the whole human race, the germs of another World War will remain as a constant threat to mankind.

I talked with many people in our armed forces—along the coast of West Africa. Many of our soldiers and sailors were concerned about the state of the home front. They receive all kinds of exaggerated reports and rumors that there is too much complaining here at home and too little recognition of the realities of war; that selfish labor leaders are threatening to call strikes which would greatly curtail the output of our war industries; that some farm groups are trying to profiteer on prices and are letting us down on food production; that many people are bitter over the hardships of rationing and priorities; and especially that there are serious partisan political quarrels over the petty things of life here in Washington.

I told them that most of these reports are just gross exaggerations; that the people as a whole in the United States are in this war to see it through with heart and body and soul; and that our population is willing and glad to give up some of their shoes and sugar, and coffee and automobile riding—and privileges and profits—for the sake of the common cause.

I could not deny to our troops that a few chiselers, a few politicians and a few publicists—fortunately a very few—have placed their personal ambition or greed above the Nation's interests.

Our troops know that the Nazis and Fascists and Japanese are trying hard to sell the untruths of propaganda to certain types of Americans. But our troops also know that even if you pile a lot of molehills of deception one on top of the other, you still cannot make a mountain big enough or solid enough to fool many people, or to block the road to victory and to an effective peace.

A fundamental or an effective peace is the assurance to those men who are fighting our battles, that when they come home they will find a country with an economy firm enough and fair enough to provide jobs for all those who are willing to work.

I am certain that private enterprise will be able to provide the vast majority of those jobs —and, in those cases where this cannot be accomplished, that the Congress will pass the legislation which will make good the assurance of jobs.

There are still a few who say we cannot achieve this and other honorable, reasonable aims for the postwar world. In speaking of these professional skeptics—these men of little faith—there comes to my mind an old word in our language—the word "pettifoggers."

Some Seek to Befog

The formal, dictionary definition and derivation of the word are neither here nor there. To most of us it brings to mind a man who is small and mean and tricky and picayune and—in a word—petty. It is the type of man who is always seeking to create a smoke screen, or fog, for the purpose of obscuring the plain truth.

Today, the pettifoggers are attempting to obscure the essential truths of this war. They are seeking to befog the present and the futuure and the clear purposes and high principles for which the free world now maintains the promise of undimmed victory.

In North Africa we are now massing armies—British, French and American—for one of the major battles of this war.

The enemy's purpose in the Battle of Tunisia is to hold at all costs their last bridgehead in Africa, to prevent us from gaining access to the straits that lead to Nazi-dominated Europe.

Our prime purpose in this Battle of Tunisia is to drive our enemies into the sea.

The British First Army in this battle, commanded by General Anderson, contains many veterans of Flanders and Dunkirk. These men have a score to settle with the Nazis.

The British Eighth Army, commanded by General Montgomery, has to its eternal credit the smashing defeat of Marshal Rommel's army and the now historic 1500-mile pursuit of those once triumphant Nazi-Fascist forces.

Allied Plan to Attack

The enemy in Tunisia will be attacked from the south by this great Eighth Army and by the French forces who have made a remarkable march all the way across the Sahara Desert under General Le Clerc, one of General de Gaulle's officers. From the west the enemy will be attacked by the combined forces of British and Americans, together with French troops under the command of General Giraud.

All these forces are commanded by General Eisenhower. I spent many hours in Casablanca with this young general—a descendant of Kansas pioneers. I know what a fine, tough job he has done and how carefully and skillfully he is directing the soldiers under him. I want to say to you tonight—and to him —that we have every confidence in his leadership. High tribute was paid to his qualities as a soldier when the British government, through Mr. Churchill, took the lead at Casablanca in proposing him for the supreme command of the great Allied operations which are imminent.

The deputy to General Eisenhower is General Alexander, one of Britain's greatest fighting men. General Alexander commanded all British forces in the Middle East, including the Eighth Army which won the decisive battle at El Alamein. He and General Montgomery planned that engagement and the tremendous advance which followed it. At this moment—as I speak to you tonight—General Alexander is standing at the right hand of General Eisenhower planning new military operations.

These important facts, reveal not merely cooperation but active collaboration between the United Nations. Let these facts be duly noted by our enemies.

Casualties To Be Heavy

Our soldiers in Tunisia are well trained and equipped, but they are facing for the first time actual combat with formidable opponents. We can be absolutely certain that they will conduct themselves as bravely and as effectively as did those young Americans under General Pershing who drove Germany's best troops through the Argonne Forest and across the River Meuse.

The battle of Tunisia will cost us heavily in casualties. We must face that fact now, with the same calm courage as our men are facing it on the battlefield itself.

The enemy has strong forces in strong positions. His supply lines are maintained at great cost but Hitler has been willing to pay that cost for he nows the consequences of Allied victory in Tunisia.

Those consequences are actual invasions of the continent of Europe. We do not disguise our intention to make these invasions. The pressure on Germany and Italy will be constant and unrelenting. The amazing Russian armies in the east have been delivering overpowering blows. We must do likewise in the west. The enemy must be hit and hit hard from so many directions that he never knows which is his bow and which is his stern.

Conflict's Future Course Forecast In His Address

It was made clear to us at Casablanca that all Frenchmen outside of France are uniting in one great paramount objective—the complete liberation of France and of all the French people who now suffer the torture of the Nazi yoke. As each day passes a spirit of unselfishness is more greatly uniting all Frenchmen who have the opportunity to strike a blow for liberation.

People Must Rule

In the years of the American and French revolutions the fundamental principle guiding our democracies was established. The cornerstone of our whole democratic edifice was the principle that from the people and the people alone flows the authority of government.

It is one of our war aims, as expressed in the Atlantic Charter, that the conquered populations of today be again the masters of their destiny. There must be no doubt anywhere that it is the unalterable purpose of the United Nations to restore to conquered peoples their sacred rights.

French sovereignty rests with the people of France. Its expression has been temporarily suspended by German occupation. Once the triumphant armies of the United Nations have expelled the common foe, Frenchmen will be represented by a government of their own popular choice.

It will be a free choice in every sense. No nation in all the world that is free to make a choice is going to set itself up under the fascist form of government, or the Nazi form of government or the Japanese war-lord form of government. Such forms are the offspring of seizure of power followed by the abridgement of freedom. Therefore, the United Nations can properly say of these forms of government two simple words: "Never again."

Atlantic Charter Aim

The right of self-determination included in the Atlantic Charter does not carry with it the right of any government to commit wholesale murder or the right to make slaves of its own people or of any other peoples in the world.

And the world can rest assured that this total war—this sacrifice of lives all over the globe—is not being carried on for the purpose with the remotest idea of keeping the Quislings or Lavals in power anywhere on this earth.

The decisions reached and the actual plans made at Casablanca were not confined to any one theater of war or to any one continent or ocean or sea. Before this year is out, it will be made known to the world—in actions rather than in words—that the Casablanca Conference produced plenty of news; and it will be bad news for the Germans and Italians—and the Japanese.

We have lately concluded a long, hard battle in the southwest Pacific and we have made notable gains. That battle started in the Solomons and New Guinea last summer. It has demonstrated our superior power in planes and, most importantly, in the fighting qualities of our individual soldiers and sailors.

American armed forces in the southwest Pacific are receiving powerful aid from Australia and New Zealand and also directly from the British themselves.

No "Inching" to Japan

We do not expect to spend the time it would take to bring Japan to final defeat merely by inching our way forward from island to island across the vast expanse of the Pacific.

Great and decisive actions against the Japanese will be taken to drive the invader from the soil of China. Important actions will be taken in the skies over China—and over Japan itself.

The discussions at Casablanca have been continued in Chungking with the generalissimo by General Arnold and have resulted in definite plans for offensive operations.

There are many roads which lead right to Tokyo. We shall neglect none of them.

In an attempt to ward off the inevitable disaster, the Axis propagandists are trying all of their old tricks in order to divide the United Nations. They seek to create the idea that if we win this war, Russia, England, China and the United States are going to get into a cat-and-dog fight.

This is their final effort to turn one nation against another, in the vain hope that they may settle with one or two at a time—that any of us may be so gullible and so forgetful as to be duped into making "deals" at the expense of our Allies.

"Unconditional Surrender"

To these panicky attempts to escape the consequences of their crimes we say—all the United Nations say—that the only terms on which we shall deal with any Axis government or any Axis factions are the terms proclaimed at Casablanca: "Uncoditional surrender." In our uncompromising policy we mean no harm to the common people of the Axis nations. But we do mean to impose punishment and retribution in full upon their guilty, barbaric leaders.

The Nazis must be frantic indeed if they believe that they can devise any propaganda which would turn the British and American and Chinese governments and peoples against Russia—or Russia against the rest of us.

The overwhelming courage and endurance of the Russian people in withstanding and hurling back the invaders—and the genius with which their great armies have been directed and led by Mr. Stalin and their military commanders—all speak for themselves.

The tragedy of the war has sharpened the vision of the leadership and peoples of all the United Nations and I can say to you from my own full knowledge that they see the utter necessity of our standing together after the war to secure a peace based on principles of permanence.

You can be quite sure that if Japan should be the first of the Axis partners to fall, the total efforts and resources of all the United Nations would be concentrated on the job of crushing Germany.

We Are in Accord

And, on the other hand, lest there be any question in Nazi or Japanese minds that we are wholly one in the prosecution of the war to a complete victory all over the world, the Prime Minister wished to make a formal agreement that if Germany should be conquered before Japan, all British Empire resources and manpower would, of course, join with China and us in an out-and-out final attack on Japan. I told him that no formal statement or agreement along these lines was in the least bit necessary—that the American people accept the word of a great English gentleman—and that it was obvious and clear that all of us are completely in accord in our determination to destroy the forces of barbarism in Asia and in Europe and in Africa. In other words—our policy toward our Japanese enemies is precisely the same as our policy toward our Nazi enemies: It is a policy of fighting hard on all fronts and ending the war as quickly as we can on the uncompromising terms of unconditional surrender.

World Honors Lincoln

Today is the anniversary of the birth of a great, plain American. The living memory of Abraham Lincoln is now honored and cherished by all of our people, wherever they may be, and by men and women and children throughout the British Commonwealth, and the Soviet Union, and the Republic of China, and in every land on earth where people love freedom and will give their lives for freedom.

President Lincoln said in 1862, "Fellow citizens, we cannot escape history. We of this Congress and this Administration will be remembered in spite of ourselves. No personal significance or insignificance can spare one or another of us. The fiery trial through which we pass will light us . . . in honor or dishonor, to the latest generation."

Today, 80 years after Lincoln delivered that message, the fires of war are blazing across the whole horizon of mankind—from Kharkov to Kunming—from the Mediterranean to the Coral Sea —from Berlin to Tokyo.

Again—we cannot escape history. We have supreme confidence that with the help of God honor will prevail. We have faith that future generations will know that here, in the middle of the twentieth century, there came the time when men of good will found a way to unite and produce and fight to destroy the forces of ignorance, intolerance, slavery and war.

The Gallup Poll

Majority of Farmers Favor Price Ceilings; Most Are Satisfied With Present Quotations

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

The following report, second of a series by the Gallup Poll, shows farm opinion on the price control question, and how many farmers think the prices they now get for their products are fair.

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 12.—One method sometimes proposed to increase farm production is to leave agricultural prices uncurbed. The theory is that the farmer will plant more of a crop if he thinks he can get a good price for it.

The Administration, in its attempt to control the cost of living, has resorted to the opposite ploicy—establishing price ceilings.

While such a policy keeps down the cost of products for the consumer, are the farmers of the country satisfied with it, or would they rather have the Government leave agricultural prices uncontrolled?

Price Ceilings Favored

The evidence from a Nation-wide survey among farmers indicates that most of those who know what is meant by a price ceiling are in favor of the policy. There is, however, a substantial minority which still believes that the best policy is to leave farm prices uncontrolled.

In probing farm opinion on price curbs, the Institute first sought to find how many farmers understand what price ceilings are. It found that approximately six out of every ten (58 per cent) do understand the term.

All who indicated a knowledge of price ceilings were then asked:

"Would you rather have the Government keep price ceilings on agricultural products, or leave them uncontrolled?"

The vote is:

Favor price ceilings	56%
Leave prices uncontrolled	28
Qualified answers	8
Undecided	8

The qualified answers were chiefly "if ceilings are put on everything," "if ceilings are fair in relation to cost" and "if all wages are controlled."

One probable reason for the vote in favor of ceilings is that the majority of farmers are today satisfied with the prices they are getting for their crops.

That is shown by the replies which farmers give to this question:

"Considering costs of production, do you think you get a fair price for all your chief cash crops or products?"

The vote by sections and for the Nation follows:

	Fair	Not Fair
All Farmers	59%	41%
N. Eng. & M. Atl.	47	53
E. Cent.	62	38
W. Cent.	75	25
South	55	45
Far West	56	44

It will be noted that the greatest satisfaction with farm prices is found in the West Central section (North Dakota, South Dakota, Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, and Wisconsin) and in the East Central (Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan), while farmers in the New England and Middle Atlantic area, and in the South, are least satisfied.

Those farmers who are not satisfied single out cotton, wheat and milk prices as the chief ones that are too low.

The following table shows how they vote.

(BASED ON THOSE WHO PRODUCE FOLLOWING LEADING PRODUCTS)

Cotton	45%
Wheat	27
Milk	23
Corn	13
Potatoes	13
Eggs	12

YOUR FEDERAL INCOME TAX

No. 34

Casualty Losses And Thefts

Losses arising from fires, storms, shipwrecks, or other casualty, or from theft, are allowable deductions in computing net income for Federal income tax purposes. Thus, if a taxpayer's home is destroyed by fire or damaged by flood or storm, or his automobile is wrecked, or if his property is stolen, he may claim a deduction for the loss sustained and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise. The amount of such loss, if incurred in connection with a trade or business, is entered in Schedule H to arrive at the net profit (or loss) shown in item 9 of the return; other losses are entered as item 15 of Deductions in return, Form 1040, and must be explained in Schedule C of the return form.

The intent of the law regarding deductions for casualties, generally, is to allow for losses caused by natural forces. Such losses may be either of a personal or business nature. To be an allowable deduction, the loss may not arise from the willful act or negligence of the taxpayer. Damage sustained to one's car by collision or accident, for instance, is a deductible loss, unless the damage is due to a willful act or negligence on the part of the taxpayer. Faulty driving would not be classified as negligence, but driving while intoxicated would be so regarded.

Likewise, in the case of claims for loss of property by theft or burglary, it must be established that the property actually was stolen, and not merely mislaid or lost.

In the case of insured property, the amount of recovery through insurance must be taken into account in determining the amount of loss.

The amount of loss allowable in the case of property damaged or destroyed is frequently difficult of determination. A general rule is that the loss is measured by the difference in the value of the property immediately before and immediately after the casualty. The loss on a wrecked car would be the difference between its market value just before the accident and the salvage value after the accident. In the case of trees, or ornamental shrubbery, destroyed by a sleet or snow storm, the measure of the loss is the loss in the value of the property of which they were a part, that is, the reduction in the value of the property arising from the casualty. This may or may not be the same as the value of the particular trees or shrubs destroyed.

In determining the amount of loss, also, sentimental values are excluded, for the reason that such values are not susceptible to measurement. Losses claimed must, in general, be related to market value of the property affected by the casualty. Losses claimed for the destruction, damage, or theft of family portraits, heirlooms, or keepsakes, must be based upon loss of intrinsic value apart from sentimental value.

A further rule regarding deductions for losses from casualties and thefts is that such losses are deductible only in the year in which they are sustained, even though they may not be discovered until a later year.

A deduction for loss from casualty or theft may be allowed only to the owner of the property with respect to which the loss is sustained.

Simplified Form 1040-A makes preparing income tax return easy.

Duke Whips Maryland, 46-43; G.W. Wins, 55-33

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The folks who assumed the Russians would be a push-over for the German army apparently didn't know about the athletes of the Soviet and the tremendous sports program which had conditioned the U. S. S. R. for a tough fight.

POVICH

The conception of the Russian as a hulking peasant of the old Czar's great unwashed, with no more deftness than a bumbling hippo, is far off base. At the Soviet Embassy yesterday they hauled out illuminating figures on the scope of athletics in Russia.

Two and a half years before Hitler thought he had something soft and sent his panzer divisions into Russia, the Soviet government boasted 5,815,000 holders of the sports badges given for excellence in running, broad jumping, throwing, swimming, rowing and shooting. Children were not included in this figure, and each holder of the five-pointed red star was not a specialist in one sport, but more nearly a decathlon man or woman.

Russia's debt to its athletes in beating back the Nazis is acknowledged as immense. In a recent speech to the Soviet anti-Fascist youth committee, Vladimir Kitaev, honored master of sports in the Soviet, told the story of Russia's champion swimmer, Burkalov:

"From the first days of war Swimmer Burkalov took his position as a torpedo man on a submarine. An enemy depth bomb damaged the sub, sent it to the bottom of the sea, and fouled its surfacing gear. Burkalov volunteered to be launched like a torpedo from the tube. He reached the surface, swam to shore and brought help that saved the entire crew and the submarine."

As a result of the rising standard of living in the U. S. S. R. and the extensive sports program, the average stature of young Russians called up for the army has, in the last six years, increased by 1.07 inches, and their weight by almost five pounds and their chest measurement by 8.6 inches.

There are no professional athletes in Russia, for the reason that sharpshooting promoters and managers is inconceivable in the Soviet system. Sports as a means of making money is not tolerated. For instance, Seraphim and George Znamensky, the champion runners of the Soviet Union, are students at the Institute of Medicine. Mikhailov, champion boxer of the Soviet who, in another country, could command hundreds of thousands of dollars in purses, worked as a chauffeur before he entered the army. The world-famous Soviet chess player, Botvinnik, is an engineer.

Before Gromov, who flew non-stop from the U. S. S. R. to America over the North Pole, was made a hero of the Soviet Union, he had been the champion weight-lifter of all Russians.

Soviet athletes have no fear of losing their jobs while competing in sports events. For all the time taken off for this purpose they are paid their average earnings. And there are no tin-eared stumblebums or sports derelicts in the Soviet, penniless after wastrel careers as professional athletes. When the Soviet athlete is at the end of his athletic career he has his trade to fall back on. In fact, he never left it.

One documented story tells the extent to which physical culture and sports have taken root among the Russian people. At Kuibyshev a whole family, the Kochetkovs, entered one of the cross-country runs that are so popular in the U. S. S. R. The 50-year-old mother took part in the 500-meter race with two of her youngest daughters. One daughter won the 1000-meter race, a son-in-law won the 5000 meters and the mother ran the 500 meters in 1 minute 50.5 seconds.

That Russian sniping you have been hearing about lately is no accident, either. As of 1940 there were 6,000,000 Russians who were members of shooting clubs. The practical Soviet government didn't give loving cups or such nonsense as prizes to its champion marksmen. It gave telescope sights for the guns. Those riflemen carried their telescope sights into the war when war came.

The Germans should not have been so surprised when they took a licking from the Russians in the winter fighting. It was not uncommon, before the war, to see as many as 12,000 Russians entered in one of the big ski meets. Russians on skis haven't done the Nazis any good for the past two winters.

Crowds of 75,000 at the Moscow soccer games in the big Dynamo Stadium were not uncommon in the years before the war. A-building, when the Germans started to get fresh, was another Moscow stadium that will accommodate 140,000 fans when completed. The Russians are truly sports minded, but their No. 1 sport now seems to be killing Germans.

"Comrades," said Boxing Champion Nickolai Korolev, in one excerpt of a recent speech, "to all sportsmen I appeal from this platform: Be excellent shots so as to kill more Germans; be brave in battle, to kill more Germans; be skillful tankists, pilots and gunners, so as to kill more Germans." Subtle, huh?

1500 See Terps Lose Tough One

Coleman and Gantt Tap Blue Devils to Victory Under Hoop; Time Catches Losers

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Two big men, Jack Coleman and Bob Gantt, who hung under the basket and alternated at tapping in 10 field goals, helped Duke's Southern Conference leaders to a 46 to 43 victory over Maryland last night before more than 1500 fans in Ritchie Coliseum.

Apparently out of the ball game as they trailed 20-10 at half time, the Old Liners came out with a bang in the second half and had pulled the score to 26-24 before the Blue Devils again pulled away and managed to hang on to their lead in the fading moments of the wild, crazy affair.

Coleman, 6 foot 4 sub forward and Gantt, the highly publicized center of the Conference champions, beat Maryland by simply standing flat-footed under the basket and batting in the erring shots of their mates. Maryland had nothing to cope with their opponents' superior heigth.

Duke No Super Club

Duke's victory was its seventh straight, but the Carolinians proved somewhat of a disappointment in the manner in which they achieved the victory. They are no super club by any means and a basket or two in the right place would have won the game for the Shipley men, who, in the 3-point defeat, had an off night.

The first half was all Duke. Maryland was scoreless from the floor in the first seven minutes before Jim Baitz counted on a follow shot to bring the score to 9-3, Duke. The Blue Devils then ran their lead to 18-6 and took a 20-10 advantage into half-time as both teams missed countless baskets, many of them apparent set-ups.

Maryland hit upon a hot hand at the outset of the second half, with Tommy Mont clicking from all over the court and Bob James scoring on two beautiful outside plays, Mont on the passing end. The Terps pulled within 2 points at 26-24, but at this point Coleman and Gantt tapped in four straight from under the rim and Duke was back in front by 7 points.

Time Overtakes Terps

The clubs exchanged baskets until Duke was in front by 46-40 with less than three minutes to play. The dead tired Terps made it 41 on Don Schuerholz's foul shot and with a minute to play Ernie Travis went all the way for his fourth basket and it was 46-43, but time caught Maryland's desperate rally.

The passing and shooting of both clubs was wild and inaccurate and the pass interceptions were many, particularly on Maryland's part when the going was tight in the final moments.

The defeat put Maryland on the brink of elimination from the Southern Conference tournament. The Terps have won two and lost four in the conference and must win three of their last four conference games to qualify for the Raleigh playoffs early in March.

Valdina Orphan Sets New Record at Fair Grounds

Riverland Defeated By Nose in Thriller As Choice Triumphs

By the Associated Press

Fair Grounds, New Orleans, Feb. 12.—In the most exciting contest of the meeting, Emerson Woodward's Valdina Orphan nosed out Harold Clark's Riverland and set a new track record in the mile and a sixteenth Natchitoches Handicap here today.

More than 4000 fans saw the winner set his own pace, take a bumping from Riverland in the bitter stretch drive, then hold on in remarkably game fashion to score in 1:43 4-5; two-fifths of a second faster than the former mark held by Bachiller.

Isidore Bieber's Bright Gallant was third, five lengths off the pair, with Moscow II fourth. Betting favoritism changed several times on the first two horses but at the close, Valdina Orphan was the choice at $4.60 for $2. The colt earned $3390, of which $1500 was Colonials Outclass Weak W.-L.

Gustafson Paces G.W. With 13 Points; Gallagher, Rausch Prove Big Factors

George Washington University cagers acquired undisputed possession of second place in the Southern Conference basketball race by virtue of an easy 55-to-33 victory over a woefully weak Washington and Lee club at Eastern last night.

Some 500 fans saw the Colonials jump into an early lead over the thoroughly-outclassed Virginians, roll into a 31-15 advantage at the half-time, and then coast in the closing moments. An even dozen players performed against the aggregation from Lexington, something unusual in that the G. W.'s seldom use more than eight men.

Colonials Take 17-5 Lead

George Washington drew first blood on Bob Grotzinger's set shot from Gallagher's pass, and then Koniszewski, Rausch, Gallagher and Gustafson hit from close in to run the advantage up to 17 to 5. The visitor's scoring was limited to singletons by Ballenger, Leon Harris, the 6-foot 4-inch center, and Washington's Fred Vinson, a W. & L. freshman.

Out front, 31 to 15, as the final period opened, the Colonials rapidly ran the count up to 39 to 22 and then began to substitute freely with the game on ice. Harry Baugher rimmed the hoops four times during the frame, in a vain attempt to stem the tide, but for the most part his team was limited to pot shots that weren't coming within spitting distance.

In a preliminary clash, Marine Corps headquarters quintet bested Army War College, 41 to 31.

A six-game winning streak of St. Alban's School five was halted yesterday as St. Paul of Baltimore rallied for a 36-30 margin at the local floor.

Roosevelt Rallies Top Eastern, 39-31

CoolidgeWhips Central, 45-32, Gains Play-Off For Title Tourney Berth; Riders Prove Tough

By Bill Burnett

Roosevelt High School's basketball club, winner of the 1940-41 public school title, last night marked itself as the team to beat in this year's tournament when it stopped Eastern, 39 to 31, on the same program that Coolidge earned a play-off for a tournament berth.

With 1500 fans, the largest crowd of the current series, in attendance at Tech gym, the Colts of Coolidge ran up 18 points before Central got any, then coasted to a 45-to-32 victory.

Thus the whole question of the last two contenders in the four-team championship meet next weekend will hinge on tonight's regular season windup. Wilson will be out to tie the Colts for fourth place in a meeting with Anacostia, and Tech will be trying to take undisputed hold of third place in a clash with Western.

If Wilson tops the Indians tonight, as it is expected to do, it will face Coolidge in an afternoon game Tuesday with the fourth spot at stake. Game time will be 4 p. m. at Roosevelt gym.

Riders Forced to Rally

Last night the feature, both principals of which had clinched a tourney spot some time ago, saw Roosevelt drag itself out of a bad spot with one of the hottest flares in the first half, finally took its intermission rest with a 20-16 deficit.

Bunny Citrenbaum needed just one and one-half minutes to overcome that in the second half. Three straight times he fired as the third session opened and Eastern was on the short end of a 22-21 count. From then on the Riders were never behind though their lead almost disappeared twice.

One of these times was with 5 minutes of the last quarter left. Quick shots by Fred Seaton and Tommy Wingo put the Tide behind only 30-29 but there Roosevelt profited by tosses from four different players—Citrenbaum, Charley Howard, Ralph Floyd and Ollie Kennedy.

Citrenbaum wound up with 15 points, easily high for the game, and Kennedy contributed 12 more. Seaton's 9 points were best for Eastern.

Central Slow Starting

It took Central all of the first quarter and 2:45 of the second to get its first point, which was all Coolidge needed. Jimmy Mess finally ended the Vikings' scoreless state but at the half they still trailed, 27-6.

Minus three of the stars who started the season and even its regular coach, John Williams, who is ill, Central made a valliant fight of it but was clearly outclassed. Mess and Johnny Gibbons accounted for 8 points each but bowed in the scoring department to Addie Bassin and Charley Greenbaum, the Colts who tallied 10 points apiece.

Soldiers Out Of Sports At Colleges

By the Associated Press

Soldiers enrolled in Army specialized training courses will not participate in college athletics, officials said here last night, although definite orders to that effect have not yet been issued.

It all boils down, directors of the training program say, to a question of time—or rather lack of time.

They explain that under the intensification of training necessary to speed into service thousands of young men trained in highly technical skills, each man will have a work schedule of 60 hours for each week he is in college.

"Take the case of a mile runner or a football player who requires much seasoning and conditioning which involves a great expenditure of time . . . he simply can't do it due to lack of time," said Col. Herman Beukema, director of the specialized training program.

"From the schedule I gave (the 60-hour work schedule)," he continued, "you can figure out whether the time is there to put that man in condition, or in other words to have him compete for his college as a quarterback. He simply can't, due to lack of time."

Brig. Gen. Joe N. Dalton, assistant chief of staff for personnel, services of supply, agreed. Dalton added: "We are not sending these men there to participate in big-time college athletics."

Asked whether a soldier would be permitted to participate in a college sports program now existing, Dalton replied:

"That brings up the question of participating in college athletics. If he is subject to becoming a representative of the college on the college team, as I understand it the decision is 'no.'"

Subsequently it was explained that no formal order to that effect had been issued—yet—and that the objection to participation in varsity sports was based wholly on the lack of time remaining after the hours which must be devoted to study.

Aside from the varsity sports, Army men said, there is no objection to soldier participation in combative sports—in fact, it will be encouraged. But it will be wholly on an intramural basis.

And, said one Army officer, some of the coaches understand—"I talked with one coach who said that he had hoped to use soldiers on his football team, but 'after seeing their schedule I just can't do it.'"

Robinson, LaMotta Are Rematched

New York, Feb. 12 (INS).—Ray Robinson, New York welter, and Jake LaMotta, local middleweight, have been signed for a 10-round rematch at Detroit on February 26, Promoter Nick Londes of Detroit announced here tonight.

Londes said LaMotta previously had agreed to terms and that Robinson signed today at Greenwood Lake, N. Y., for an encore of their last week's match in which La Motta scored a surprise upset victory over the previously unbeaten Negro.

Dodds, Mitchell Resume Duel on Track Tonight

By the Associated Press

Boston, Feb. 12.—Having failed twice to shake off the terrific closing drive of Earl Mitchell, Indiana's latest ace miler, Gil Dodds, the fast-starting Boston divinity student, has revised his racing schedule drastically for tomorrow night's duel in the Boston A. A. track meet's famed Hunter Mile.

In his previous starts against Mitchell, in Cleveland last March and in New York last week, Dodds set such a hot early pace that he was burned out when the trailing Mitchell cut loose with his finishing spurt.

Both stars also will be forced to pay close attention to another rival in their five-man field, Frank Dixon, New York University's sensational Negro freshman flier, who runs equally well in front or from far back.

Cardinals Underdogs To Maryland Mittmen

Clash Tonight in College Double Bill; Old Line Cagers to Meet Generals

Washington's most outstanding collegiate boxing match of the year will take place tonight at Ritchie Coliseum, home of the University of Maryland, when the favored Old Line mitt slingers take on Catholic University's fistic hopefuls in the feature of another Saturday night double-header which starts with the Old Line basketball quint meeting Washington and Lee in a Southern Conference game at 8 p. m. The boxing match will follow immediately after the cage game.

Maryland's edge in the boxing meet comes through greater experience and its fortunate possession of three undefeated and hard-punching boys in the 165, 175 and heavyweight classes in Johnny Gilmore, Herb Gunther and Len Rodman, who have earned the title of "Dynamite Row." The Old Liners have gone through five bouts and have lost only to Virginia at Charlottesville, 5 to 3. Catholic has won from Coast Guard and Michigan State and lost to Western Maryland, opening match, when the green Cards were greener than they are now.

Washington and Lee's quint whipped Maryland, 50 to 40, at Lexington, Va., recently. The Old Liners, battling to win a place in the S. C. tournament, have won four and lost seven in league play and need this game to keep alive their chances. A defeat may ruin Maryland hopes. With Ernie Travis and Tommy Mont clicking, the Terps may erase the 10-point advantage the Generals enjoyed in their last outing.

A. U. Beaten By R.-Macon In 52-51 Game

Ashland, Va., Feb. 12 (AP).—Staving off a desperate rally in the final minutes of play, the Randolph-Macon Jackets chalked up victory number six on their Mason-Dixon Conference record by edging out the American University Five 52 to 51 here tonight.

A fast breaking offense gave the Eagles a 10-to-2 lead in the opening minutes, but the Jackets came back to take a 30-to-21 margin at the half.

Valdina Orphan Sets New Mark

in war bonds (maturity value). The Woodward 4-year-old carried 121 pounds, five under scale, while the year older Riverland, at 124, was four under standard.

The race showed that both Valdina Orphan and Riverland are keyed up to a fine edge for the $25,000 New Orleans Handicap, to be run over the same distance on February 27.

The triumph was the second of the day for the Valdina Farm establishment, also for Jockey Ferril Zufelt. Steve Brooks, who usually rides Riverland, was not up today, having been badly shaken up in a spill the day before. Leon Haas subbed astride the Clark color-bearer.

Valdina Orphan, making his second start of the meeting—he was a fast closing fourth in a muddy sprint affair recently—ran according to his speedy morning trials. He stole a lead of several lengths in short order and maintained the wide margin to the stretch. Then Riverland, which had been racing closer up than usual, drew alongside the pacemaker and appeared to bump the ultimate winner twice while taking a narrow lead. Valdina Orphan was not through, though, and came on again to earn the laurels. Bright Gallant, well placed throughout the trip, could not menace the front pair.

Lawyers Protest Ahearn Fight Ban

hundreds of spectators departed, comes as a direct result of Ahearn being refused a permit to stage a bout between Tony Musto and Al Hart on Monday, February 22, with the commission explanation that Joe Turner's monopoly on Monday nights will continue.

The letter to Keech, in addition to charging members of the commission had no right to be defended by a member of his office at the taxpayers' expense, also told the Corporation Counsel that neither Ahearn nor his counsel would appear unless duly subpenaed. The letter also pointed out that Gray's file stated the Boxing Commission could not be sued as a part of the District Government.

Justice James M. Proctor recently ruled the commission could not be sued as an arm of the District government, but denied Gray's motion for dismissal of all charges, giving an opinion that the boxing bosses could be sued as individuals.

Ahearn's lawyers' letters to the boxing commission, in addition to charging the commission had given Joe Turner a monopoly on Monday nights, also charged the commission attempted to "decide in advance" whether the proposed Musto-Hart bout would be a satisfactory scrap. The letter asked the boxing body if either Hart or Musto were incapable of fighting; unwilling to fight; unable to fight or if insufficient entertainment for the price proposed in the eyes of the public.

The letter also contained a demand for an immediate answer if any other promoter other than Ahearn asked for February 22. It concluded by saying that if the boxing commissioners "attempt to decide that you will create and protect a monopoly in any person, you are acting illegally and will be held to strict accountability." The boxing commissioners were also advised that the District of Columbia Commissioners and members of Congress were being advised of these letters "complaining of your recent arbitrary and capricious action."

Capital Store Sales Up 16% During Week

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington department store sales in the week ended February 6 increased 16 per cent over the same period of last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. This was the period before shoe rationing started and does not include the recent buying rush, which is believed to have brought the heaviest sales here of the year.

In the four weeks ended February 6 local store sales were 3 per cent larger than in the same period last year.

The entire fifth Federal Reserve district showed a sales gain of 19 per cent for the week ended February 6 and an increase of 4 per cent for the four-week period.

Nationally, the Federal Reserve Board estimated that department store sales last week were 19 per cent higher than during the corresponding period of 1942. All Reserve districts showed gains, featured by a 51 per cent upsurge in the Dallas, Tex., area.

Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., in its weekly survey of retail trade, said yesterday:

"Many retailers this week experienced the biggest sales of the year on a buying rush inspired by the shoe rationing order. . . The buying rush, short-lived in many cities, was said to be subsiding by midweek but retailers noted that rationing had given considerable impetus to the already early purchasing of spring apparel. Sales frequently reached totals usually expected 4 to 6 weeks later in the season."

DuPont Sales Reach Record $498,313,857

By the Associated Press

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 12.—The swift growth of America's chemical industry as it went to war was exemplified today in the annual report to stockholders of E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co.

To meet the rubber shortage, United States chemists have devised synthetics that include duPont's neoprene, described as "the full equivalent in quality of natural rubber for combat and heavy-duty tires."

War with Japan also cut off the domestic supply of silk; nylon was offered by duPont as a substitute for parachutes and a variety of other uses.

"The chemical industry now has facilities to produce . . . more than double the Nation's normal consumption of nitrogen-bearing compounds for fertilizers and all industrial uses," the report added.

Smokeless powder, TNT, and "more than half of all the fast dyes required for cotton uniforms and similar equipment by the Government" were other of the products listed.

DuPont reported the largest sales volume in its history, $498,313,857, against $480,109,939 the year before—and the smallest net income since 1938, or $63,941,275, including dividends of 20 million dollars from holdings of General Motors stock. This net was 29 per cent less than reported for 1941.

Earnings, after preferred dividend requirements, equaled $5.07 a common share, compared with $7.49 in 1941. The company set aside five million dollars for post-war and other contingencies, lifting this fund to a total of 25 million dollars. Another $21,900,000 was provided for payment to the Government as a result of renegotiation of war contracts.

On the other side of the budget was a credit to income of $5,300,000, representing the excess of prior years' provision for taxes.

The company said all Navy and Army ordnance projects assigned to it were on or ahead of schedule. It estimated it had saved the Government 260 million dollars in construction costs.

Sales of these stores were estimated at $9,932,000,000 in 1942, one-third lower than in 1941. Nondurable goods stores had record sales of $46,451,000,000, 18 per cent higher than the previous year.

Rickenbacker-for-President Move Is Handicapped

IF CAPT. EDDIE Rickenbacker really has any presidential ambitions, they have already been tarnished by his supporters.

Huey Long's old protege, rootin'-tootin' rabble-rouser Gerald K. Smith, has now come out for Rickenbacker for President, which is the kiss of death for almost anyone.

Also some of the Chicago America First crowd who tried to boom Lindbergh are now grooming Rickenbacker behind the scenes. Rickenbacker himself was an isolationist testified against various war bills before Congress, but admitted his errors immediately after Pearl Harbor.

Shipbuilding Waste

Shocking waste occurs in the conversion of ships built by the Maritime Commission and taken over by the Navy. The ships are originally designed for merchant uses, but are taken over when completed, or nearly completed, for combat use by the Navy.

The Navy has different requirements, and demands installation of different equipment, and the discarding of equipment already installed.

The waste comes from failure to anticipate these changes before the ship is completed on merchant designs. In fact, it often happens that a ship which the Maritime Commission knows is to be taken by the Navy will be completed along the original lines, then delivered to the Navy, only to have great quantities of equipment torn out, new bulkheads built in, seamen's quarters rebuilt, and so on.

Explanation for Maritime's action is that if they allow the Navy to come into the yard and take over the conversion, "we never get the ship out." In other words, they don't want the yard cluttered up with a ship which the Navy, in its elaborate and procrastinating manner, is trying to convert.

Navy Delays

IN ONE CASE, the Navy took over two ships before they had moved out of a Maritime Commission yard, one to be a converted into a submarine tender, one a destroyer tender. But the conversation was protracted for 18 months, thus immobilizing the ship ways and preventing other construction.

Consequently, the Maritime Commission feels it is better to complete a ship according to original designs, and get it out, and require the Navy, if it wants to make changes, to make them in its own yards.

In many cases, however, the Navy does not decide to take over until the ship is completed. Then they tear out hundreds of thousands of dollars of new equipment and cause delay in completion.

There is hard feeling between the two agencies on account of the hidebound methods of the Navy, which is cluttered up with officers and desks and bureaucracy, and cannot move rapidly. One officer comes in and wants one change, and another wants another change, and then along comes a retired Annapolis graduate, and he has still other ideas.

Jap Zeros Nose-dive

In the early part of the Pacific battle, reports came back that Jap zero planes were superior to ours. That was true. But now the American public can rest at ease.

For reassurance, consider this latest story from the South Pacific: In operations over Buna, 16 American P-40 pursuit planes engaged 18 Japanese zero planes in a fight which was close enaugh to be observed from the ground.

In spite of the fact that the P-40s are an older type of American plane, these 16 were able to destroy 13 of the zeros, which hurtled through the air within sight of United States soldiers watching the show.

Only one American plane was lost, and its pilot was saved.

Crazy WPB

Many people in Washingtn have said what they thought of the War Production Board behind its back. But one man who has told WPB members what he thought of them straight to their face is usually placid Commissioner Thomas H. MacDonald of Public Roads.

Tom MacDonald ha his say at a farewell party to WPB Vice Chairman James S. Knowlson. For weeks MacDonald had been sidetracked, sabotaged, circumvented in his roads program. But now he had all his WPB enemies in one place at one time. He took advantage of it. Going up to the first man he met, MacDonald said:

"Do you work for the WPB?" The answer was a nod. "I just wanted to tell you that I think WPB is a cock-eyed organization. Now that I've told you, I'm going to tell it to some of these other fellows."

MacDonald moved on.

"What do you mean," he demanded of his next victim, "by letting Ernest Kanzler resign?" Kanzler was Edsel Ford's brother-in-law." He was one man who believed in keeping his word. If he promised a thing, he did it. Yet you let him leave."

"Yes," concluded Commissioner MacDonald, "the WPB is just plain crazy."

In Turlock, Calif., he was instrumental in securing a block of ground near the center of the city and building a beautiful and practical church edifice.

Church Federation Unit Scientifically Plans Locations

(This is the second of a series of articles about the wartime role of the Federation of Churches—an organization now engaged in its annual financial drive. This year's goal is $38,000. Other articles by federation departmental heads will appear on subsequent church pages.)

By Rev. Albert T. Rasmussen

Director of the Federation's Department on Research and Church Planning

Protestant leaders, faced with the acute problem of extending religious services to the newcomers of the city and in new communities springing up in the Washington metropolitan area, and realizing that the problem was too great for one denomination to tackle alone, met last spring to for ma commission on research and church planning. Dr. Horace E. Cromer, superinendent of the Washington East Methodist District, was named chairman.

Under this commission a department of research and fact-finding was established to provide concrete materials and to scientifically determine religious needs in order to engineer the most economical and effective distribution of effort and of churches. The task was so large that the denominations could not afford to risk duplications and competition in some areas while leaving other populous areas without adequate church programs.

The Washington Federation of Churches is one of the first federations in the country to establish a special department of research and church planning to plan the location of Protestant churches on the basis of actual requirements.

In the commission the representatives of the various denominations mutually plan the areas where each can most advantageously work. Surveys are being made in the most populous new areas to discover residents' religious affiliations. Where there are sufficient numbers to require a particular type of church, allocation is made to that denomination. The attempt is made to space churches in reference to population and transportation.

Studies have been made in Arlington County, in Alexandria, in the Westmoreland Circle area, in the District and in communities across the Anacostia River. Others are under way.

In the Arlington County study 10,982 families were interviewed and data tabulated on 33,055 individuals. It was found that 65 per cent of these people had moved in within the last three years. It was discovered that while 74.6 per cent of the adults claim church membership somewhere in the country, only about half of the Protestant members have been assimilated into any of the churches here.

In Arlington only 31 per cent of the Protestant members are attending with any degree of regularity. All of the areas studied in Washington are extra high in church membership back home but a large percentage of these people have let church attendance lapse upon coming here.

One-third of the Protestant children in the country are enrolled in no Sunday school and many of those who are enrolled attend very little. Present churches need to expand their activities and in several areas new churches are urgently needed. Cards from the canvass have been turned over to the churches of the denomination that the individuals prefer, so that the churches can take steps to welcome these people and made them feel at home.

The evangelism committee of the federation has been established to meet this urgent situation and to organize a unified campaign to bring these people into active participation in church life. The Rev. Robin Gould is chairman of this committee which has already sponsored the Join-the-Church Sunday which brought large numbers of people into local church membership. A special committee of which the Rev. G. E. Schnabel is chairman, is planning a city-wide Lenten campaign under the slogan "Our Capital for Christ."

To the church people of Washington awareness produces action, and united strategy through combined planning will guide this action into the most fruitful channels that the church may take its place in the foundation of the new city.

IN BIBLE PROPHECY

Is Japan Destined to Control the Orient and Then Conquer the World?

JAPAN IS ACTUALLY MENTIONED BY NAME IN THE BIBLE

Location of Jap's Last Stand

For the past 15 years John Ford has publicly stated in his lectures in the large cities across America that Japan and the United States were destined to meet in armed conflict in fulfillment of Bible prophecy. Now that they have joined in deadly combat for survival, what will be the outcome? The Bible gives the location of the battlefield where Japan will ultimately be defeated. This battlefield is located thousands of miles from where Japan is fighting now.

Catholics Set BiblicalSunday Observance

The Catholic Biblical Association of America has announced the annual observance of Biblical Sunday on Septuagesima, February 21.

Especially significant is this third annual Biblical Sunday for the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the renowned scriptural encyclical of Pope Leo XIII, Pvodidentissimus Deus.

Archbishops and bishops throughout the Nation have evinced special interest in the reissuance of the famed encyclical which has come to be recognized by hierarchy throughout the world, as the foremost papal document on the Bible in modern times. A copy will be sent to all diocesan chanceries for distribution to the clergy.

The Rev. Joseph L. Lilly, C. M., secretary of the Association of America's Catholic Scriptural Scholars, made the announcement in a letter to the hierarchy and 14,000 parish rectors in the United States.

Cloistered in their monasteries, ranking prelates and simple order priests labored gloriously for five years to revise and modernize the vernacular of the Challoner-Rheims version of the New Testament, which like all lasting literature had become dated and not sufficiently lucid, for constant reading.

Published in 1941, it was the first revision in 192 years. Last fall, these same, often-times anonymous scholars of the church produced a volume of accompanying commentary to the New Testament. Both volumes were acclaimed by the ministry of faiths, other than Catholic.

Today, in a world of death and destruction, the Catholic Biblical Association, whose work has been praised by the pontifical biblical commission, are encouraging Catholics and non-Catholics to read the New Testament daily, especially during the approaching Lenten season.

Carrington Speaker At Howard Chapel

William E. Carrington, assistant professor of religion at Howard University, will be the speaker at the All-University Religious Service to be held in Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel of Howard University tomorrow at 11 a. m.

Carrington received his education at Oberlin, Livingstone College and Union Theological Seminary. This service is open to the public.

"SUNSET AND EVENING STAR"
— ALFRED TENNYSON —

Sunset and ev'ning star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea,
But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

Tennyson never wrote a poem more exquisite or enduring. The tender lines reveal the serene beauty of the sunset of Tennyson's life, a life of sweetness and love, and of firm faith.

Landon Urges Joint Fight on 'Nazi NewDeal'

By the Associated Press

Omaha, Feb. 12.—Former Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas urged tonight "a coalition of real Democrats and the Republican Party" as a guarantee that Vice President Wallace "and his fellow travelers will not lead us down the same disastrous primrose path which Hitler had led his people."

Earlier, in an interview, he said that President Roosevelt should "reassure the American people" in an early statement that he will not be a candidate for a fourth term.

"In Washington," Landon said, "it seems to be a foregone conclusion that the President will be a candidate for a fourth term. They say it's being planned that way—and that's what it looks like to us country boys.

Not Ready for Dynasty

"I don't believe, however, that the American people are yet ready to start a life dynasty for any man or any family."

In a speech prepared for delivery at a Republican Lincoln Day banquet in Omaha, the former Republican presidential nominee asserted that "at last the practical progressives and the real liberals of the Democratic Party are awake to the fact that by use of Trojan horse methods a small but dominant group of Nazi new dealers, who seek to establish here what Hitler described in his early days, as the national socialistic state, have seized control of their party.

"The tangle of domestic policies and managing bureaucracy which prevented our return to prosperity under the Roosevelt Administration is preventing an efficient prosecution of the war."

To Curb 'Blank Checks'

Pittsburgh, Feb. 12 (AP).—Representative Joseph Martin, minority leader of the House, said tonight the Republican Party intends to "restore control of the Government to the people and to curb this rapidly expanding bureaucracy by ending the reckless granting of blank checks."

He said in an address prepared for delivery at the Lincoln Day dinner of the Allegheny County Republican Club:

"Congress has turned down numerous projects only to find later that these projects have been built with 'blank check' funds. This is not only a defiance of the Congress, it is a direct blow against our Constitutional form of government.

"If these 'power-mad' bureaucrats can defy Congress and get away with it, we have traveled a long way on the road to dictatorship. We don't want that kind of a government—not even a benevolent dictatorship here in America."

Uruguay Council Functions Halted

Montevideo, Feb. 12 (AP).—President Alfredo Baldomir today ordered the council of state, which had served as the Uruguayan advisory Parliament for almost a year, to cease functioning as a prelude to the opening February 15 of the new chamber of deputies and senate. The President's decree carried the signature of all his ministers.

The council was created by decree on February 21, 1942, after President Baldomir had dissolved the Parliament in a bloodless coup d'etat.

The council of state acted under the chairmanship of President-elect Juan Jose Amezaga and former President Jose Serrato.

New Training Plan

Army Course At Colleges Begins Mar. 1

College training for selected Army personnel will be started by March 1 unless "unforeseen difficulties" prevent, Col. Herman Beukema, director of the Army's specialized training program, said yesterday.

Engineering courses will begin first, Colonel Beukema said, with other types of training expected to be under way by April 1. He emphasized that the men in training would be soldiers, not college students in uniform, a statement which was seconded by Brig. Gen. Joe N. Dalton, assistant chief of staff for personnel, Services of Supply.

"We are not sending the men there to participate in big-time athletic programs," General Dalton said. "They won't have time."

Their work schedule would be long, he explained, with 24 to 25 hours a week of class and laboratory work, many hours of study, and five hours of military training and one of physical training daily. Courses will be shorter, in general, than those customarily offered and will not lead to degrees.

Typical lengths of courses were: Electrical and chemical engineering, seven quarters; mechanical engineering, six quarters; foreign areas, a study of language and customs to qualify men for liaison work between the Army and native populations, 6 to 15 months.

A list of 271 colleges eligible for the program has been published. These, Colonel Beukema said, do not include institutions which will be eligible for basic instruction and for medical courses.

The number of men under training at any one time probably would not exceed 150,000, Beukema said. He estimated that slightly fewer than 50,000 would complete their courses in 1943.

Scholastic requirements will be based upon those set by the colleges for civilian students. Tests will be given every 12 weeks, and men failing to meet requirements will be returned to active duty.

U. S. Airmen Raid Rangoon As Celebration

By International News Service

New Delhi, Feb. 12.—The Tenth United States Army Air Force based in India celebrated its first anniversary today by blasting Rangoon, Jap-held capital of Burma, and the oft-bombed Myitinge railroad bridge.

Brig. Gen. Clayton L. Bissell, commanding officer, asked how his men would mark the day, answered:

"Keeping on the job. Two bombardment formations are concentrating on railroad yards at Rangoon today. Another is operating against Myitinge bridge."

British headquarters in New Delhi revealed today that Japanese forces facing Field Marshal Sir Archibald Wavell's army in Burma have been reinforced. A communique said:

"A series of sharp counterattacks by the enemy against our forward positions in the vicinity of Donbaik and Rathedaung completely failed and were repulsed with severe losses to the enemy. The Japanese have been reinforcing this area.

"In the Chin Hills, Japanese troops recently attacked our forward posts. After a sharp, 24-hour action, the enemy, suffering relatively large casualties, broke off the action and withdrew."

Isolation 'No Longer Possible,' Knox Says in Lincoln Day Talk

By the Associated Press

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 12.—Secretary of the Navy Knox declared tonight that the United States henceforth must maintain powerful sea and air forces and must have for them a system of bases stretching around the world.

Knox foresaw that after the war this country must supply the major part of the military power needed to enforce the peace "against the desires and designs of any nation or group of nations bent upon world-wide aggression."

In addition, the Secretary said, "we must contribute greatly to the establishment of an economic system which will permit backward peoples to share in the prosperity of a world free from the threat of aggressive war."

The civiliar head of the Navy expressed these views in an address for delivery at exercises commemorating the 134th anniversary of the birth of President Lincoln. He traced the political difficulties which beset Lincoln because of his insistence on serving larger purposes than those of political expediency, and he said that today "we see history repeating itself with disturbing precision."

"Our President, our leaders, have been subjected to all the same familiar charges of 80 years ago," Knox asserted. "We have seen again in these hours of another supreme struggle the same temptations of partisan advantage obstruct our larger purposes."

"I assume," Knox declared, "we have learned as a people that isolation—political, economic or military—is no longer possible. I assume we have learned by brutal experience that wars are no longer something you can get in or stay out of like a street fight by the exercise of choice. I assume, therefore, that we have also learned that our influence will be measured by our strength; that you can't fight with dollars and that we must maintain hereafter powerful military forces, particularly on the seas and in the air. We must implement these forces with a system of bases around the world.

"If we have learned these things we have come a long way. But to prepare for peace we have far more to learn, to learn now while we are at war so that when peace comes we will be ready for it.

"Have we learned, for example, that the old system of balance of power is a war breeder and is not good enough any more; have we learned that there can be no enduring political security without economic cooperation; that trade barriers and economic nationalism spread poverty, not prosperity; that we can not maintain our standard of living in a world of want; that we can not increase prosperity by raiding others; that our best customers are our best competitors; that as we enable other nations to develop their resources and raise their standards of living we will improve ours?

"And, finally, have we learned that unqualified freedom is anarchy; that there are no rights without duties; that we can not accept rights without incurring responsibilities as citizens, and that the same is true in international affairs?"

On the same program, Sir Owen Dixon, Australian Minister to the United States, declared that "the things for which Lincoln strove, our enemies in this war are bent on destroying."

Lincoln believed deeply in equal political rights, Sir Owen asserted, and the fact that such legal views never have been handed down in principals of freedom in either Germany or Italy "accounts in no small degree for the failure of democracy to take root in those countries."

The Federal Diary

EDITOR'S NOTE: Today and every Saturday this column is turned over to the views and comments of Federal workers. Send contributions to Jerry Kluttz, editor.

I make no defense for the indiscreet officials who use Government cars for personal business. In these days when the public is made to curtail the use of their cars, I agree that the officials of our Government should set a better example.

But there's another side of the picture that I've never seen fully described. I'm what you'd call a subofficial. I represent my department in matters before a dozen different Federal agencies. I must go from one meeting to another in office buildings throughout the city. Rarely am I able to secure the use of a Government auto and I'm forced to spend from $3 to $6 a week out of my personal funds on taxis.

There must be thousands of us who are forced to pay our own transportation expenses while we are attending public business. We're abused, too.

I suggest to Congress that the private cars of all Federal officials, except Cabinet officers, be sold at public auction, that all the scores of chauffeurs and attendants be fired, and that public officials be required to use taxis, at public expense, to conduct public business. This plan would be efficient, economical and fair.

"SUB-OFFICIAL."

I HAVE READ so much about the poor, disillusioned, unloved, barelegged and down-at-the-heel Government girl, whom one reporter has called a "depressing sight," that I feel inspired to write my story since coming to Washington.

Reared in a small Midwest town and "educated" three years in a college where I learned practically nothing, I went back home after school and got more depressed for lack of any creative activity. For recreation we had the band concert every Saturday night, the peanut wagon, and the wild West movies. When I received a telegram offering me a three months appointment in Washington I was on the train four days later with all my bag and baggage.

For the first time in my 21 years I heard my first symphony concert, drank my first cocktail and drew my first paycheck. I rented an apartment with another girl and learned how to fry an egg. I had been brought up spoiled and pampered, wholly unprepared to meet the facts of life. I was also inhibited, shy, and intellectually undeveloped as a result of being too long in the backwoods.

Since that memorable day my life began I have done everything from typing names and addresses for seven hours straight to child taming. I have been bored, lonely and disgusted, but I decided long ago it wasn't the town, but little Sally, who was maladjusted to the cruel world. So my advice to all such girls is to wake up and live and forget their hearthsides not only for the duration but for the rest of their lives. O. S.

Since Pearl Harbor it has been a popular pastime to lambast the growing concentration of bureaucracy in Washington. These critics are constantly harping about the waste and inefficiency of the Government. They often remain on Olympian heights without ever really discovering whether workers are necessary in one department or another. They fail to see that the real fault is not in the total number of workers or their improper utilization, but rather in the inherent weaknesses of bigness itself. Justice Brandies many years ago reiterated his distrust of large organizations; he meant private organizations at that time, but I am certain he would mean Government today. It was not that he feared the individuals in the organization but that he was disturbed by the ponderous immensity of big business per se.

The Government has siphoned off thousands of people from private industry in order to conduct the business of running the Government during war time. The common complaint is that there is large scale unnecessary recruiting of civilian workers. Girls have said "I sat in my office for days waiting for something to do, and when I finally complained to my supervisor, she told me to write a letter and make myself inconspicuous."

I do not defend such a course of action on the part of planners and supervisors, but anyone who has worked in large new organizations can understand how smooth, efficient functioning is only an ideal. Remember, the Government is in competition with private enterprises; it is necessary to insure an adequate force of workers some time in advance of actual need. Most recruiting has been done through the Civil Service Commission and as a result the time differential between placement and need ofttimes is unusually great. Sincere critics would not have Civil Service recruiting abandoned for the sake of expediency. The total waste in man-hours of work, although probably never computed, is infinitesimal compared to the total value of man-hours of work expended on the war effort. M. D. L.

'Ounce of Prevention'

Arrangements for the northern Virginia bridge tournament to be held in the District Feb. 26-28 were going along fine until somebody discovered that the hotel room engaged for the event was practically lined with mirrors.

It was decided to find another room where the walls are just walls.

What About It, Mr. Brown?

She ought to get six pairs of shoes a year instead of three, a Dallas, Tex., woman told the rationing board.

She wears a No. 5 shoe on one foot, and a No. 7 on the other—so three pairs would really be only one and a half, she explained.

The puzzle is en route to Washington.

D. C. to Join Other Areas In Raid Test

New Signal System To Be Given Trial Wednesday; Old Methods Are Out

The District will join Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia in a test Wednesday morning of the Army's new system of air raid alert signals for the first time, it was announced unofficially last night.

Col. Henry A. Reninger, liaison officer for the third regional Office of Civilian Defense, said the daytime test would be best to acquaint the public with the new signals, and added that it would be followed by a night test a week or 10 days later.

Continuing in line with military requests for uniformity in air-raid signals, a ban has been placed on warning devices used by emergency cars in the District. This includes ambulances, fire-fighting equipment and police cars.

Thus, beginning February 17, if the sleeping citizenry has its sleep shattered by a siren, it will be for an air raid or for a test blackout.

The Commissioners' order, issued against the recommendations of Civilian Defense Director H. C. Whitehurst, forbids the sounding of sirens for any purpose and at any time except to announce an air raid or test.

Officials of the departments affected were instructed to find substitute noises before Wednesday. Fire Department reports most of its new equipment has locomotive bells and many of the older vehicles have exhaust whistles. The Police Department, however, has only sirens upon its modern equipment and, believing it impossible to devise substitutes before Tuesday midnight, will rely upon particularly forceful blasts of the regular horn to get its emergency cars through traffic.

Emergency, Casualty and Freedmen's Hospital superintendents agree that until some other noisemakers can be devised, the flashing red light and klaxon will be wholly inadequate. The managers of private ambulance fleets are not disturbed by the ruling, as most of their vehicles are used when there is no necessity for speed.

Also affected by Lewis' request were suburban areas, where traffic is light anyway. Here, the summoning of volunteer firemen is made different since it had been the custom to rouse these members by sounding the firehouse siren. Pointing out that even a large house could burn down before the firemen could be assembled by individual telephone calls, county officials said that some new direct method must be worked out immediately.

Alexandria Man, Six Other Officers Get Navy Cross

Comdr. William M. Cole, 40, of 607 Beverly Drive, Alexandria, Va., was one among seven Naval officers to receive the Navy Cross for extraordinary heroism in action, the Navy announced yesterday.

Commander Cole's wife and their 8-year-old son, Billy, live at the Alexandria address. The officer is originally from Media, Pa., where his parents now live. His brother, Lieut. Col. George Cole, is on duty with the Army.

Commander Cole was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1924 and was at the Naval Research Laboratory here for a year before he resumed sea duty last year.

The citation given to him and the other officers read:

"The force to which you were attached engaged at close quarters and defeated a superior enemy force. Your daring and determination contributed materially to the victory which prevented the enemy from accomplishing their purpose."

Kitten Only Fire Casualty

A two-alarm fire orginating in the storage room of an apartment house at 2824 Twelfth Street Northeast drove 20 residents outdoors yesterday morning. Only casualty was a kitten that died of smoke.

The blaze consumed several mattresses in the basement locker room and sent dense clouds of smoke through the building. Firemen controlled the flames and prevented them from spreading beyond the basement.

District Pays Lincoln Honor At Memorial

War-busy Washington yesterday took time out for celebration of the 134th anniversary of the birth of the country rail splitter who became the Nation's sixteenth President.

In Lincoln Memorial, two ceremonies were conducted—the first at noon by the District Chapter of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion; the second at 2 p. m. with a special interdenominational religious service in which two Catholic priests, two Protestant ministers and two Jewish rabbis had part.

In the first program, representatives of 25 local patriotic groups and members of the Army, Navy, Coast Guard and Marine Corps watched in reverent silence while President Roosevelt and his aides laid a wreath at the base of the monument.

Loyal Legion Acts

James Vernor of Detroit, commander-in-chief of the Loyal Legion, was present for the ceremony and also was guest of honor at a luncheon by the organization afterward at the Cosmos Club.

The legion's membership includes officers and male descendants of officers who served in the armed services during the Civil War. It was organized in Philadelphia in April, 1865, shortly after Lincoln's death.

Those who led the religious services at 2 p. m. were Dr. Sidney Goldstein of New York City, member of the Commission on Justice and Peace of the Central Conference of American (Reformed) Rabbis; the Rev. John M. Hayes, assistant director of the social action department, National Catholic Welfare Conference; the Rev. W. H. Jernagin, pastor of the Mount Carmel (Negro) Baptist Church and chairman of the executive board of the Fraternal Council of Negro Churches in America; the Rev. Francis McPeek, director of the social welfare department, Washington Federation of Churches, and the Rev. E. L. Harrison, president of the District Association of Baptist (Negro) Churches.

Religious Service

Mr. McPeek and Mr. Harrison laid wreaths at the foot of Lincoln's statue. The service was under the sponsorship of Bishop Francis J. McConnell, senior bishop of the Methodist Church of the New York area; the Rev. John LaFarge, editor of America, a Catholic publication, and Dr. Goldstein. Dr. Goldstein was the only one of the three sponsors able to attend.

Birthdays of Lincoln and Frederic. Douglass were celebrated last night at the Musolit Club, with addresses by Senator Hugh Butler (Republican) of Nebraska and Senator William Langer (Republican) of North Dakota. Perry W. Howard was master of ceremonies.

Senator Butler ascribed the greatness of Lincoln to his ability to chart a course and follow it unflinchingly to a definite end. The clean life of Douglass was the basis of a glowing tribute by Senator Langer, who applied the lessons of Civil War days to the present era.

Other speakers were Victor W. Rotnem, Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, Levi David, James A. Cobb, A. E. Lichtman, Dr. Ambrose Caliver, Elmer M. Lancaster and Lewis Alexander.

Paul Lincoln Cornell of the Board of Economic Welfare last night delivered a talk on "The Life and Personality of Abraham Lincoln" at Chevy Chase Junior College.

Other birthday celebrations included a meeting last night under the auspices of the Communist Party at the National Press Club, where Ruth McKenny, author of "My Sister Eileen;" William Z. Foster and Angelo Herndon were speakers.

Marine Corps Opens Ranks To Women

New Jersey Flier Is Named Director; Recruiting Plans Are Announced

The Marine Corps, first branch of the service ever to admit women during World War I, becomes the last to do so during World War II with the announcement today of a women's reserve. Its members will be known simply as marines.

Newly appointed director is Mrs. Ruth Cheney Streeter of Morristown, N. J., airminded former State Defense Council member, who will hold the rank of major.

Recruiting of women between 20 and 50 as officer candidates and between 20 and 36 as enlisted personnel will begin immediately at Marine recruiting stations and offices of naval and Marine officer procurement, with local headquarters at 1320 G Street Northwst.

The women reserves, sans alphabetical abbreviations, will be trained in schools already established for Navy WAVES at women's colleges throughout the country. Upon completion of training they will be assigned to Marine Corps training centers, posts and stations to release men for combat duty. By law, members of the reserve can serve only within the continental United States, just as the WAVES and SPARS.

Both married and unmarried women are eligible, but no married woman with children under 18 will be accepted and no woman married to a member of the Marine Corps can serve.

Applicants for commissions must have a college degree or two years of college and at least two years of business experience, or "special qualifications in a particular field." Enlisted women must have at least two years of high school or business school or special qualifications.

Same Materials

Uniforms will be cut from the same materials as those of the male marines, and the jaunty green cap will have a red cord, knotted in front, surmounted with the Marine insignia.

Pay and rank will be identical to the men, but the highest commissioned rank below the director's will be that of captain.

Major Streeter, 47, is joint donor of the Cheney Award to members of the Army Air Corps for acts of valor. Before the war she was interested principally in health and welfare work, and from September to December, 1941, was chairman of the Citizens Committee for Army and Navy, Inc., for Fort Dix, N. J.

Major Streeter learned to fly in 1940 and received her commercial pilot's certificate in April, 1942. Since May, 1941, she has been the lone woman member of the committee on aviation of the New Jersey Defense Council.

Three in Service

A graduate of Bryn Mawr, she was married in 1917 to Thomas W. Streeter, lawyer and banker now retired. They have four children, two sons in the Navy, one in the Army and a daughter, Lillian.

The 1943 version of the women's reserves is a far cry from 1918, when Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels authorized the enrollment of women in the Marine Corps for clerical duty. Principal demand was for competent stenographers and typists, but women with bookkeeping or general clerical ability also were enrolled. Highest rank was that of sergeant.

By the time the Armistice was signed, 277 were on active duty. Records show that 305 enlisted. They were discharged on July 30, 1919, and transferred to an inactive status in the reserve. Disenrollment was gradual, however, and none remained when World War II started.

A man and a woman died at Washington hospitals yesterday of injuries suffered in traffic accidents here and in nearby Prince Georges County earlier this week.

Joseph A. Morris, 68, of 3265½ M Street Northwest, succumbed at Georgetown Hospital at 8:55 a. m., victim of head and internal injuries. He was knocked down by a Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co. bus in front of his home Monday.

Police said the bus was operated by Robert L. Caudle, 34, of 515 M Street Southwest. He will appear at a coroner's inquest later. Morris' death was the thirteenth due to District traffic this year.

Mrs. Mary Winstead, 52, of Route 2, Jenkins Corner, in Prince Georges County, died at Providence Hospital from injuries suffered last Tuesday in an accident on Silver Hill Road near the District line.

Letts Grants Stay of Gas Rate Order

Justice F. Dickinson Letts of the District Court yesterday granted the Washington Gas Light Co. a stay of execution of his order of last Wednesday vacating the $200,000 annual rate increase allowed the company by the Public Utilities Commission.

The order vacating the increase, which would have become effective February 20, has now been stayed until after the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia has had an opportunity to decide the gas company's appeal. In granting stay, Justice Letts denied the gas company's plea that the stay remain in effect until after a possible appeal is taken to the United States Supreme Court.

Attorneys for the gas company argued that the expense and effort necessary to change their accounting system was too great to risk a possible reversal of Justice Letts' decision in which case the procedure would have to be repeated.

They further stated that if the old rates were returned now it would be necessary to make an immediate refund to thousands of customers with the possibility, in case of a reversal of the decision, of being forced to re-collect these small refunds. They pointed out that the Office of Price Administration, the director of Economic Stabilization or any customer would in no likelihood be damaged because the gas company kept accurate records and would be fully competent to make the necessary refunds.

Harry R. Booth, attorney for the OPA, argued that the stay was not justified on the ground that the original order granting the increase was illegal. Attorneys for the gas company said yesterday that an immediate application for appeal would be made.

After the hearing, the PUC instructed its counsel to file a second appeal against the order. Dissenting member Gregory Hankin did not vote on the decision to appeal.

Rent Office Helps War on Room Racket

The Office of Rent Control yesterday offered full cooperation to the United States Attorney's office in its efforts to stamp out what Assistant United States Attorney Sylvan Schwartz termed "the vicious room broker racket which has mushroomed in Washington in recent months."

Schwartz said he began investigating the "racket" after hundreds of complaints had been received at Municipal Court. He said a few of the operators had been brought into court, but none had been convicted.

Warning the public to beware of the "racket," Schwartz said it operated among both licensed and unlicensed real estate men. Small scale operators, he said, were content to mulct their victims of sums ranging from $5 to $10 on promises to rent them rooms which in most cases were not available, or falsely represented.

Most of these operators, Schwartz said, would collect a week's rent in advance and then give receipts with a clause stating no refunds would be made after 10 hours. The time the receipt was tendered generally was late afternoon, so when the victim appeared the following morning to collect, he would be told about the 10-hour clause.

In many cases, Schwartz said, no receipt was tendered, and the operator simply denied he ever had received money.

The larger operators accepted sums ranging up to $200 as deposits for the sale of houses, and when the deal fell through either would disappear or use the tactics of the smaller operators in avoiding a refund.

Milk-Supply Slump Seen By Dairymen

Cite Higher Feed Prices, Labor Lack, Rationing as Ills Crippling Industry

A serious slump in the Washington milk supply was forecast here yesterday by a group of dairymen from Montgomery and other nearby Maryland counties who met with representatives of the Department of Agriculture and Office of Price Administration.

Prominent among the dairymen was W. Lawson King, owner of 500 cows and operator of one of the largest dairies in Montgomery County. He told Department of Agriculture officials that the milk supply, on the decrease for some time, would be increased when herds are put out to graze in May and June, but that a still more serious drop is in prospect when the herds are put on costly dairy feed.

Protein feed is being rationed, he said, its price has doubled in a year, labor costs have jumped 40 to 50 per cent and even at these advanced costs skilled labor cannot be had.

King said that the dairymen were losing up to 10 cows a month from the larger herds due to disease which could have been prevented had they been handled by skilled labor. These cows, he said, are not being replaced.

The major complaints of the dairymen are:

(1) Present milk prices meet only actual production costs.

(2) Federal agencies "pirating" farm labor compel dairymen to employ unskilled and consequently incompetent labor.

(3) Priorities and rationing prevent them from getting the necessary feed, machinery and tires.

Editors Told To Aid in War Fight Muzzle

The two-fold duty of the American press in wartime is to join with the Army, Navy and Administration in furthering the war effort, and at the same time prevent any "muzzling" of the press, W. S. Gilmore, president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, told the society at the Willard Hotel yesterday.

Gilmore's message preceded a series of closed conferences with Government officials, which included a talk by WI Director Elmer Davis, a meeting with President Roosevelt and a conference with Secretary of State Hull.

Pledged to Secrecy

Each of the 236 editors attending the two-day annual meeting pledged himself not to report any of the off-the-record discussions and not to discuss them outside the room.

The convention of editors, originally scheduled to be held in New York in April, is being held here at the request of Government officials who "wanted the privilege of free and frank discussion," Gilmore told the society.

He admitted that there was some opposition to the move from members who felt that it might be an effort to muzzle the press.

"But in the mind of the directors there is no danger of this," Gilmore stated. "The directors took at face value the explanation of Government officials that what they wanted was an opportunity to tell us facts that can not be printed, but which we, in our desire to write and comment on war news intelligently, should know."

Outstanding Contribution

Gilmore said one of the outstanding contributions the press has made to the war effort was last autumn's scrap drive. He quoted Paul C. Cabot, deputy chief of the WPB Conservation Division, as saying, "I don't believe that drive could have been possible without the newspapers."

However, Gilmore, urging the establishment of a permanent institution for the society instead of what amounts to an annual seminar, regretted that it was to the publishers' rather than to the editors' association that the Government turned when it wanted the salvage drive put over.

This morning's off-the-record conferences will include talks by Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff; Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States fleet, and Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commanding general of the United States Air Corps.

Walter S. Gifford of the American Red Cross will be the luncheon speaker. The afternoon panel discussion, conducted by Donald J. Sterling of the War Production Board, will include talks by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, WPB Chairman Donald Nelson, Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt, OPA Administrator Prentiss M. Brown and OCD Director James M. Landis.

The meeting will close with a dinner tonight at which Col. John Jestyn Llewellin, chairman of the British Supply Council, and Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes will speak.

Home dwellers should place cans in a metal or wooden container or a cloth or burlap bags for collection by the city refuse trucks on regular collection days.

And One Flew West

By Anne Tedlock Brooks

CHAPTER 3

Hugh walked beside her, and looked down from his tall height to the black little head which was carried so proudly. The wind whipped the curls back from her forehead, and her eyes were the most startling blue he had ever seen.

They hurried into the office. Hugh's eyes had not caught the picture of his brother as they passed the billboard.

They heard a girl's laughter, and then Cherry Mason's voice. "Oh, Major, you're just kidding me! You know better."

Judith's eyes widened. But there was Cherry. As far back as she could remember, Judith had never spoken to the Major in any but the most dignified manner.

Cherry sat on the edge of the desk, her pretty legs swinging back and forth while she nestled a cold pop bottle in a handkerchief, and laughed at Major Townes. Her head tilted backward provocatively, her scarlet lips showing a flash of small even teeth.

Major Towne was off guard. "Oh, good morning, Miss Nichols."

Judith smiled and said, "Good morning, Major Towne. I'm bringing in a prospective student, Mr. McAllister."

Cherry slid down off the desk and inched up to them. She smiled at him and Judith added, "And Miss Mason." She knew that wasn't the proper thing to say, and she was suddenly surprised to find that she didn't care.

"Always glad to meet new students," said the major, clearing his throat, aware of how he must have looked to them.

And Judith thought unreasonably, Yes, why not, my dear major? And why shouldn't Jinx fall for Cherry's flagrant charms, if they could undermine the stolid sedate old major's common sense? For she and Hugh McAllister could plainly see that the man's flushed face and nervous manner had proclaimed him annoyed that they had found him enchanted with Cherry.

A week later Judith had settled down to a good solid schedule of teaching green students the rudiments of flying. The new trainees were mostly from Clifton College, each having at least two years of college training.

Hugh McAllister fell to Judith's lot, although Jinx would have liked him, for he was the most promising of all the new ones. Judith once felt like offering to trade Hugh for one of Jinx's students, but Johnny told her she was crazy and she admitted it to herself.

Cherry and Jinx were together every night now, as summer deepened. Johnny's little sister, Eleanor once drove out to the field with Johnny's wife, Blair, and had not done so again. She had seen Cherry kissing Jinx as they stood in the shadow of a plane and Judith heard her soft sobs in the darkness later.

Tonight was a quiet summer evening, and Judith was going back to the office for some reports that had come in on the last mail and that Cherry had forgotten to mention. Johnny would be working tonight as he did so often of late.

Johnny was in one of his rages, Judith realized as she got out of her car and walked toward the lighted office. Blair's curly head was shadowed against the window, and Johnny's deep voice was angry and loud. "Darn that girl. Cherry has not been worth a continental since Jinx began to teach here. Her reports are a muddle and she gets by with the major because she's pretty and has big blue eyes. But she won't get by the C. P. T. P. authorities!"

"Oh, Johnny, don't get so upset. It'll work out some way."

"Yes, and you know how! I'm dead on my feet. Get up at 5 in the morning, then have to work till midnight all this week, straightening out Cherry's mess." He grabbed the telephone and Judith heard the Shuffleboard number as she came in at the door.

Women's Club News

By Genevieve Reynolds

Once Senator Henry M. Blair quite bluntly said to Susan B. Anthony.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

But instead of going home, the great temperance leader and fighting suffragette continued to appear at every session of Congress to ask for woman's suffrage. Her achievements became history long ago.

So come Monday, for the first time in its annals, the anniversary of the birth of Susan B. Anthony will be celebrated in the Halls of Congress.

Now, instead of booing her out, at least 14 Representatives will honor her with laudatory speeches. It's a different story from the 1869 to 1906 reception given her in Congress.

This celebration of Susan B. Anthony's 123d birthday is being held in connection with the fight for equal rights for women now being waged by the National Woman's Party. In a sense the granting of equal rights will complete the work this remarkable woman began in 1850.

It was through the pressure of her opinion that women teachers were given more equality of pay. And she participated in the movement to open colleges for women. That isn't all, Susan B. Anthony was a leader in other causes than women's rights. For example, she took part in the fight on intemperance and she urged Abraham Lincoln to issue the Emancipation Proclamation.

The program on the House floor for Monday afternoon was planned by U. S. Guyer in cooperation with the National Woman's Party, which has worked for the Equal Rights Amendment since its introduction into Congress in 1923. In the gallery will be members of the Woman's Party from many sections of the country. Two of Susan B. Anthony's friends who now live in Washington will be present, Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, who was associated with Miss Anthony in the woman suffrage movement, and Miss Margaret Shanks, who was Miss Anthony's nurse during her last illness. Also attending will be Elizabeth Cady Stanton's granddaughter, Mrs. Nora Stanton Barney of New York, the first woman to graduate as a civil engineer in an American college.

Among the members of Congress who are to take part in the ceremony are:

Homer D. Angell, Oregon; Frank A. Barrett, Wyoming; Fred Bradley, Michigan; William T. Byrne, New York; Charles S. Dewey, Illinois; Daniel Ellison, Maryland; U. S. Guyer, Kansas; Robert Hale, Maine; Edwin Arthur Hall, New York; Joe Hendricks, Florida; Estes Kefauver, Tennessee; James P. McGranery, Pennsylvania; Sam Russell, Texas, and Earle D. Willey, Delaware.

Did You Know That . . .?

Mrs. Thomas Cajigas entertained at a bridge luncheon this week at her home, "La Casita." It was the first of a series of "do your bit" luncheons for the benefit of the Homeopathic Hospital. Those donating for the luncheon and door prizes were Mme. Felipe Munilla, Mrs. Frank Fannon, Mrs. George Tribble, Mrs. Nathan Huriwitz, Mrs. E. Brison Norris, Mrs. Charles Robertson and Mrs. Lucie Smith.

Members of the Washington group, Pioneer Women's Organization of Palestine, have been working as diligently as the proverbial ants. All the hubbub is for the benefit, card party and bazaar sponsored by the group tomorrow, 3 p. m. to midnight at the Jewish Community Center. Supper is free for service men, who are being designated by the USO club for the treat. Mrs. Martha Abraham is donating all the food for the boys in uniform. Mrs. Luba Kaplan is chairman of the card party. Proceeds of the benefit will be turned over to the Pioneer Women's Organization in Palestine, which is doing outstanding work for the Jews uprooted from their homes by the war.

MRS. KAPLAN

Officers in the Army, Navy, Coast Guards and Marines were honor guests at Valentine dance given last night by Alpha and Beta chapters of Epsilon Sigma Alpha Sorority at the Roger Smith Hotel. Mrs. Bess Bradshaw was chairman of the dance committee.

Mrs. Raymond H. Ewell, chairman, promotion and instruction, women's division, war savings committee, was guest speaker at a meeting this week of the woman's auxiliary, D. C. Medical Society.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Gay-Hearted Reformer

If Susan B. Anthony in her little India shawl could be sitting in the gallery of the House of Representatives Monday she would again smile her kindly ironic smile, and even perhaps laugh aloud. For in the same gallery in which she so often heard herself and her followers denounced and ridiculed she would hear Congressmen from all parts of the United States paying tribute to her memory.

Congressional co-sponsors of the Equal Rights Amendment will speak at the program arranged by the National Woman's Party in honor of the 123rd birth anniversary of the woman who fought so long and valiantly to get another amendment through Congress, that giving women the right to vote. Miss Alice Paul, chairman of the National Woman's Party, who is here directing the campaign for the passage of the Equal Rights Amendment, has general direction of the program.

Her Humor Still Lives

The memory of Susan B. Anthony seems to become greater with the years. Is that merely because she was a great reformer, because her work bore great fruits for women? No, because there have been other great achievers and humanitarians whose names are remembered today only in cold, impersonal gratitude. It is rather because Susan B. Anthony, like Abraham Lincoln, was above all a warm, live human person and because she possessed a quick wit, a lively sense of humor and because she carried in her heart the ironic "laughter of the gods."

Nothing brings us nearer persons than to laugh with them. Nothing makes us remember them better than the times they made us smile. And women today can laugh with Susan B. Anthony at many little things. They can smile at situations in their lives similar to those she faced, as when arriving in a town on a lecture tour with her friend and co-worker, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, and putting Mrs. Stanton to rest while she attended to the heavy work—hunting up the janitor of the hall, getting publicity, and rounding up a crowd, she would read in the paper the next day that Mrs. Stanton was a "beautiful, attractive woman, while Miss Anthony was a homely old maid."

They can also smile at the memory of her wit, of her quick retorts to men who turned on her the ever familiar clumsy weapons of those who habitually impede feminine progress—as when she replied to Horace Greeley's "Miss Anthony, you know the ballot and the bullet go together; if you vote, are you ready to fight?", with "Yes, Mr. Greeley, just as you fought in the late war at the point of a goose quill."

Put Men Teachers In Their Place

And all the women school teachers in the world can smile today at the memory of Miss Anthony's short but celebrated speech before a teachers' convention. The exponent of women's rights, had sat two days listening to men orate. When she asked permission to speak, the matter was debated a half hour. Finally she was given the floor. The subject being discussed was the lack of respect with which teachers were being treated. Miss Anthony told the convention: "You have failed to comprehend the cause of this disrespect. As long as society says woman has not brains enough to be a doctor, lawyer or minister, but has plenty to be a teacher, every man of you who condescends to teach, tacitly admits before all Israel and the sun that he has no more brains than a woman."

And perennial youth in rebellion will always feel a tie with Miss Anthony in her reply to a Chicago clergyman who assailed her because she had sought to have the World's Fair open on Sunday, maintaining young people were better off there than roaming the streets. "Would you allow a young man to go to a wild west show on Sunday?" a clergyman asked her. "Of course I would," she replied. "In my opinion, he'd learn more from Buffalo Bill than from listening to an intolerant sermon."

And many there be in wartime Washington who can delight in the story of Miss Anthony's visit to President Johnson to ask him to subscribe to her new magazine, "The Revolution." Entering the White House she walked, according to the account, "along a corridor filled with henchman and office seekers chewing tobacco and squirting juice over carpets and furniture directly into the President's office." He rebuffed her curtly, saying he never read the papers and did not have time to do so. "You'll read this one," she said. "It's going to tell you any number of things your Congress never did."

Endured Men's Ridicule, Abuse

It was indeed fortunate Susan B. Anthony had a sense of humor. Otherwise, how could she have stood the ridicule heaped upon her? She saw herself caricatured in newspapers, heard ranting orators describe her as an "infidel" and term her and her followers "members of a hybrid sex." She heard Senator Vest, the great friend of the dog, warn the Senate that giving women the vote would unleash more blood curdling horrors than followed the French Revolution. She visited Kansas City on a lecture tour and read of her arrival in a local newspaper, "The cab drew up to the Coates House (the leading hotel) and Miss Anthony and two other men alighted."

During a suffrage convention a newspaper described the women who attended as "the poor creatures who take part in the silly rant of brawling women." Even in a temperance convention from which she and other women were ejected, the men leaders remarked, they "were rid of the scum of the convention."

When she presented her suffrage resolution in 1868 to the New York Democratic convention of Tammany Hall she was greeted, according to a paper of the day, "with a yell such as Milton might imagine to arise from a conclave of the damned, and this was followed by roars of laughter that shook the walls, by yells shrieks and deafening howls."

None of this embittered Miss Anthony. She could always smile tolerantly at men and at people. The New York World wrote of her in her later days, "If ever there was a gay hearted god-natured woman it is Miss Anthony. The gray-haired friends of her youth are all "girls' to her and she is a girl among them."

It is because of this perhaps that Susan Anthony the woman, as well as her work, lives today.

Fashion Find:

By Jeanne Contini

At first glance this looks like a pleasant cardigan suit—which it is. The kind of suit you feel at home with the first time you put it on. It's that, too. A suit which is a pleasure to look at in a business office, yet is easy enough to go marketing in. True. It is an appropriate weight and color for every season, any year—neutral, but with character. Certainly. All this may be true, but why is this particular suit singled out as a find?

Because for about $20 you have everything mentioned above, plus generous seams, a deep pleat, a smooth zipper placket, a hem in the skirt, nice workmanship, good tailoring. You have a heather-colored shepherd check tweed jacket bound in navy flannel—a perfect mate for a navy flannel skirt. The tweed skirt would be a fine foil for a monotone jacket or dark wool blouses to be worn with a beret in the early spring or late autumn.

Please call National 4200, Ext. 324, and we'll tell you where it is to be found.

Memo to Miss Brown

SUBJECT:

Blueprint for the Future

No more shall we pity the mathematics-minded girl who, a few years back, gave up her "impractical" dreams of building bridges and skyscrapers to become a frustrated stenographer, a female engineer in the not-so-old days was a specimen for Robert Ripley and those few who did exist died off of starvation during the thirties (along with a few of their male colleagues.)

Today it is different. An engineer or draftsman is worth his weight in gold—as his pay check shows; he is literally being rationed among the various military and civilian agencies which need him. "Why aren't there more women engineers?" every personnel man is screaming, forgetting that he guffawed heartily at the girl in his trigonometry class who presumed to encroach on such purely masculine territory. But let us forgive and forget—and make up for our frailties of the past by taking advantage of the present.

We too can design ships and planes and bridges! We too can create a bigger and better engine or turbine or spark plug! Studying engineering and drafting now can cost little more than a few hours of effort a week, for free courses on these war-timely subjects are going on in many a local nook and cranny. So take up the T-square, Miss Brown, and build your dreams with a knowing hand.

Drafting classes are being held at George Washington University, Catholic University and Howard University as a part of the War Training Program which the United States Office of Education is carrying on. There is no tuition for the thrice-a-week classes in engineering drawing, mechanical drafting, ship drafting, and the like and women are preferred. There is a great need in Government agencies for women who know the whys and wherefores of drafting.

Both architectural drawing and mechanical drawing classes are available at the Department of Agricultural School with a special fee of $20 for each course.

Several of the public night schools offer drafting courses. Information may be obtained from Mr. Lockwood's office, National 6000 or, for Negro students from Mr. Lewis's office, NAtional 6000.

The more ambitious math-minded young women may delve into engineering with a minimum of expense and a maximum of effort. A 30-week War Training course (at George Washington) in Engineering Fundamentals is open to women college graduates, costs nothing, and qualifies its students for appointments as Junior Engineers in Government Service or, of course, in defense plants. This course takes considerable effort and some curtailment of week-night social activities but it's worth it!

Somewhat more fundamental is the course in mathematics for engineering computations (also a War Training course) which involves 15 weeks of slide rules, triangles and logarithms. This is open to high school graduates and WOMEN ARE PREFERRED!

Inspection of Engineering War Metals is another War Training course open to high school graduates, trains willing women to become inspectors in Government plants and agencies concerned with war materials. The need for trained inspectors these days is little short of stupendous.

There are lots more—in keeping for your preference for ships, motors, aeroplanes and such—in fact, too many to mention.

SHOP AND RUN

By Marianne

We continue to recruit members for our "Make It Do" campaign. You automatically belong when you take inventory of your clothes situation and resolve to do something about it. What hardworking business woman or budget-minded housewife doesn't have a dress that's too tight, a coat with torn lining, or perhaps a tweed suit that Jim discarded becaues he felt better in khaki? An accountant would call these "deferred assets"; we call them "compliments to Hitler" and immediately uncover the places that will alter and repair them for you.

If you "Make Do" the things you already own, new fabrics can be used for the army of men and women who will bring home the victory and future purchases. Here's how.

SOME CHANGES MADE: Here's a good way to start your "Make it Do" address book. The time and ability which we don't have often prohibits us from revitalizing a dress or coat. It's possible, however, to have these sometimes distastful jobs of alterations done at excellent little shops. They'll do everything from letting out a hem to putting a seam under control. Also alterations for men's clothing.

A Trick With a Suit: If there's a man's suit around that isn't going to be occupied for the duration, you can have it made into a lovely tailored suit for yourself. It's a patriotic idea to take the valuable priority wools out of the moth balls and put them into service. All this for about $15.00.

Second Front News: Coats have a bad habit of wearing out down the front. In a manner professional, but quite simple, for these surgeons of the scissors, they'll fix it up like new and you'll proudly wear it for "good."

Purely Camouflage: If you possess a dress that's so definitely passe in style or one you've worn so many times it lets you down, get together with one of these dressmakers. An unbecoming neckline can be remedied, separate jackets and skirts can be made, perhaps a housecoat from that old evening gown. With her mastery and your original designs it can be remodeled to look as 1943 as a ration book.

The Inside Story: Quite often the lining in our coat wears out while the coat is perfectly new. A torn lining can look quite shabby—besides involving a maze of difficulties in putting one's coat on! We can suggest a place where they'll make a new lining and do such spiritlifting things as putting a red lining in a black coat. All for reasonable prices.

Open and Shut Cases: Since the manufacture of all metal zippers is prohibited, it's wise to have yours repaired when they break. This shop will repair and install them, or put in a new zipper if yours is beyond repair. We also know a shop that has a few long zippers in stock—the last of them

Buttonhole making stumps even the most expert sewers. If you don't want yours to partake of a "homemade look" in that sense of the word, have them made for you. The same shop will repair buttonholes or make covered buttons in the material you want.

Tend to Your Knittin': The knitted woolen garments you possess are worth all the care you can give them. If they begin to ravel or have holes in them, have them reknit immediately.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Overfeeding may, of itself, cause the young baby to break out in an eczematous rash. Ordinarily, of course, such rashes tend to indicate the baby's sensitivity to some food or foods in its diet. But I have noticed, quite often, that young babies newly introduced to foods, and fed extremely generous diets, repay us with rough, red foreheads or cheeks or scaliness around the soft spot. When the diet is modified or decreased, somewhat, the skin clears up.

One case that would seem to illustrate this well was that of a baby born one month prematurely, who, though weighing only 5 pounds at birth, at 4 months of age weighed 13 pounds. This baby might better be considered only 3 months old but such a gain would be large for even a full-term baby.

A baby of three months may have difficulty digesting starches, so when offered cereal this difficulty is reflected by a rash on the skin. This baby had had not only a feeding of cereal (which the mother forced on him by bottle when he would not swallow it by spoon), but a formula well fortified with cereal gruel. The result, in my estimation, should have been expected. He had a persistent rough skin on forehead and cheeks and a well-developed case of cradlecap.

All new foods should be started in teaspoonful amounts and no increases made for a few days until it is ascertained just how the baby will react to them. Then they should be increased by teaspoonful.

Always when the baby is first introduced to a new food by spoon he treats the spoon as he has heretofore treated the bottle nipple, by pressing his tongue against it forcibly. This sends the food out almost as fast as the mother can spoon it in. It is not an indication of his desire to repudiate the food but only his reaction to an unfamiliar feeding utensil.

To be patient, to give another spoonful of food when the first is pushed out, will, by trial and error, show baby how it can go down the throat merely by swallowing it. Once he has mastered the technique he'll be eager to get more and more food that way.

Meanwhile, for a baby of this tender age, no force need be used to get cereal into him. A week or two or four will make a great difference in his capacity to swallow mouthfuls of food and in his capacity to digest them.

Our new leaflet, "Feeding From Two to Nine Months," suggests the time for new foods and the amounts to be offered. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

It's About Time

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Preslicing of bread for home consumption recently banned by the Government caused quite a tempest. Frayed tempers, cut fingers and ragged-edged bread slices were visioned by many persons.

But the clouds concerning bread slicing have been cleared by one nationally-known company. They have produced a welcome innovation in the form of a slice-marked loaf. Scored on the bottom of every loaf is a series of marks to guide the home-slicing knife. This is accomplished by running the loaf over discs just before it is wrapped. By following the slice marks the smooth texture of the bread is cut into portions of uniform thickness, without tearing or crumbling. This certainly makes the slices easier to toast.

Here is the way this baking company suggests manipulating the bread-slicing:

"Lay the loaf on one side with the slice-marks toward you; slice from a bottom corner; use a sharp knife with a sawing motion."

If you want to know the kind of bread that has these helpful markings, call National 4200, Ext. 324.

Mihailovitch Shown Soldier With Soul, Says Krizman

Yugoslav Attache Lauds New Film Of Country's Guerilla Army

By Elizabeth Henney

It is a good picture because it shows Mihailovitch as he really is, a soldier with a soul, and a general with a paternal interest in the welfare of his men.

So thinks Serge Krizman of the new film "The Chetniks" a tale of the fighting Yugoslavians, soon to be released by the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Co., and which was previewed by the press yesterday. Krizman, who has been attached to the Yugoslav Embassy here, was loaned to Hollywood for duty as technical adviser for the production, as was Maj. M. V. Mishovich, the Assistant Air and Military Attache of the embassy, who acted as military adviser for the film.

Krisman's qualifications as technical adviser for the film are an interesting part of his personal history. Having started his career in life as combination actor and architect, he was instrumental in the development of film production in Yugoslavia. It was in his capacity as architect that he came for his first lengthy stay in this country, for he landed in New York as architect for the Yugoslav pavilion of the New York World's Fair.

After the fair ended he was attached to the embassy here in a general sort of public relations capacity. Though he has practiced neither of his professions as actor or architect in this country, he is extremely interested in observing our technique in both. He thinks skyscrapers are practical and functional and that colonial architecture is "cute."

It is on the subject of filmland, however, that he waxes almost poetic, for his description of the technical aspect of American movies is accompanied by a gleam in the eyes and a volcanic explosion of Slavic handwaving. Tall, with a heel-clicking courtliness of manner, dark hair and brows, a dusky fringe of eyelashes and a small mole like a beauty spot just below the outer corner of his right eye, he would undoubtedly hit top-billing in this country if he chose to continue his career of acting.

Betty Bragg Is Bride of Arthur Mercer

Miss Betty Bragg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll L. Bragg of Chicago and Washington, and Arthur Bruce Mercer, U. S. N. R., son of Mrs. Arthur Mercer of Chicago, were married last evening in a candlelight service in the Lincoln Chapel of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white satin made with a fitted bodice which had a sweetheart neckline and a full floor-length skirt. Her finger-tip veil of tulle was held with orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of white roses.

Miss Janet Bragg, who was her sister's only attendant, was in ice blue taffeta, the frock fashioned with a bouffant skirt and fitted bodice. She wore a white lace Juliet cap edged with seed pearls and carried a bouquet of mixed spring flowers. Walter Carroll, U. S. N. R. of Chicago, was best man, and the ushers were Lyle Havens and Paul Arlege of Bonham, Tex.

A reception was held following the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Mercer will make their home at the Chateau Thierry at Twentieth and S Streets.

Mrs. Mercer, the bridegroom's mother, was here for the wedding and also from Chicago for the wedding was the bride's cousin, Harry Porter Wilson.

War No Tea Party, WAACS Find in Africa

But They Don't Squawk at 7-Day Work Week and Chilly Nights

By Ruth Cowan

Allied headquarters in North Africa (Delayed) (AP).—The WAACS overseas are finding out that Mars doesn't take a holiday.

Right now it's a seven-day work week for the first detachment of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, although later the Army hopes to give the girl stenographers, clerks, telephone operators and staff car drivers a half day off each week.

The WAACS now here, representing 39 States and the District of Columbia, are becoming aware that war is not a tea party and they're agreeing with their brother soldiers that the home folks don't fully realize what it's like.

They rave about the charm and quaintness of the city in which they are stationed. "It's wonderful!" says WAAC Auxiliary Frances Garland of Woodstock, Ill.

They talk about their living quarters. "I never thought I would wind up in a convent," comments Auxiliary Mary H. Lovell of Curtice, Ohio.

But North Africa isn't exactly a winter resort at this season, for there's no heat in the picturesque suburban convent and the exquisite old tiles in the dormitory floors are chilly to step on at 5:45 a. m.

They stood reveille at first but they had to use flashlights and it was decided there was no sense in tempting Jerry, who frequently stages air raids in this area just before dawn.

Another break the girls are getting is that they no longer have time for drills, and Drill Sergt. Anne Bradley of Philadelphia, has been made supply sergeant.

Cooks Are on 24-Hour Shift

Breakfast hour is 6:15 a. m. for the auxiliaries and half an hour later for the officers, but the WAAC cooks are on a 24-hour shift. There are groups of WAACS going and coming from work around the clock.

One unit in the personnel section leaves at 6:45 a. m.; those reporting to the Army motor pool start out at 7 a. m.; at 8 a. m. the day shift telephone and teletype operators go, and the clerical and stenographic force departs a half hour later.

Incidentally, speaking of office workers, one WAAC Auxiliary, Nana Rae of New York City, former private secretary to the president of a steamship company, is happy as a lark—she has drawn the No. 1 job as secretary to Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander of the Allied Forces in North Africa.

Getting back to the working schedule, there's a late day shift of telephone operators getting home at 10 p. m. and another group waiting at midnight to return at 8 a. m. The latter group eats supper just before leaving and fills in with sandwiches while working.

Long Hours Prevail

For some of the WAACS, especially those in the Motor Corps, their work day is sometimes 9 hours or even longer.

"But they are not squawking," said Lieut. Joan Jousten of Houston, Tex., commander of the service platoon. "They don't care about long hours. That's what they asked for."

To allay the anxiety of parents back home, Uncle Sam is on the job as escort—the girls are transported back and forth in buses, staff cars or in jeeps.

Again on the brighter side, all is not work. Numerous dances are scheduled for the WAACS by various Army detachments and already several WAACS are rehearsing for a play at the American Red Cross Service Club.

About 20 per cent of the WAACS are allowed passes out each night and the privilege is rotated. A WAAC who wants to stay out after work asks for a pass the night before, but she has to be back at her quarters at an hour when most folks at home are going out to play.

Oliver-Barnes Wedding Here

Foundry Methodist Church was the scene yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock of the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Rita Barnes of Washington and Tyler, Tex., to Arch James Oliver, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Arch James Oliver of Covington, Va. The Rev. Frederick Brown Harris officiated.

The bride, niece of Mr. and Mrs. Morris L. Barnes of Cumberland, Md., had as her matron of honor Mrs. G. H. Thomas of Washington. Michael A. Derkacz was best man. After the ceremony the couple left for Covington, Va.

Sergeant Is Glamour Girl Of Africa

By Inez Robb

Allied Headquarters in North Africa (INS).—Possessed of the prettiest supply sergeant in this or any other army, the first overseas detachment of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps is destined to live in Army clover.

So long as strong men in the supply service can buy, beg, borrow or steal in hope of a smile from WAAC Supply Sergeant Anne Bradley of Philadelphia, her sister WAACS are going to live at the top of the pile.

This beautiful supply sergeant with real eye lashes as long as those pasted on by Hollywood stars has only to fix her large Irish blue eyes on men in the supply services to have them empty the cupboard in her behalf.

Supplies on A G. I. Platter

Indeed, she does not even have to ask for supplies. Solicitous noncoms in the supply services call and offer her their services and their wares on a G. I. platter.

Their conversations always follow the same pattern. Invariably the noncoms ask, "Is there anything I can get for you? Is there anything the WAACS need?"

Then, before the demure WAAC supply sergeant can answer, out tumbles the $64 question: "Say, what about having dinner with me tonight?"

And then Sergeant Bradley—bright little Audrey—just laughs and laughs and laughs—to herself. Because what she is concerned with is getting the wherewithal for dinner for the girls—not having it with the boys.

The sergeant, who looks like a poster girl and who used to handle public relations for a large Philadelphia concern, keeps her French dictionary handy. She converses as much as possible with the French nuns who maintain the convent where the WAACS are quartered.

Teaches American Slang to Arabs

But Sergeant Bradley, who has been upped from drill to supply sergeant since reaching North Africa, is having more luck teaching American slang to little Arabs than learning French herself.

Her pockets filled with gum, cigarettes and candy which she distributes to Arabian small fry, Sergeant Bradley has so far advanced the Arabs in English that when she asks those who congregate around the convent doors "What's buzzin', cousin?" they cry in chorus: "I'm cooking with gas."

In the meantime, Sergeant Bradley continues to be as much of a sensation in Allied headquarters as she was at our East Coast port of embarkation and on the transport en route to Africa.

But she didn't come to Africa to look for sheiks. All she has looked for here besides WAAC's supplies is costume jewelry for her five sisters, Joan, Edna, Mary, Virginia and Barbara.

Mrs. Barnett Would Like to Get Shoe Back

LOST — Somewhere between the Mayflower and 1622 Rhode Island Avenue. One black suede walking shoe.

To Mrs. George Barnett this is a real tragedy. Shoe rationing is no cause for worry, Mrs. Barnett patriotically believes, but when you lose one of your only pair of good walking shoes, it brings sorrow to your heart.

Doing her duty like other patriotic citizens, Mrs. Barnett makes it a practice to walk whenever it is possible to wherever she is going, even though she has a broken arm and shoulder which for months has refused to mend.

So—— when she was invited to the Mayflower one evening she put on her walking shoes and carried her slippers in a bag over her arm. When the time came to go it was too late to risk walking alone, so she took a taxi without changing back ot her walking shoes. Alas, upon arriving home she found only one walking shoe in her bag and has yet to find the other one.

To friends' question "How in the world could you lose a shoe," she has only one reply, "I don't know, but I did, and I can't get it back."

Like Cinderella she is sitting waiting, not for a Prince Charming, but for a black suede shoe.

Mihailovitch's Guerillas Provide Vital Film Story

'Chetniks' a Thrilling Factual Film; Miss Hayes Tumbles Another Record; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

WHEN "CHETNIKS," the Twentieth Century-Fox film story of Gen. Draja Mihailovitch and the fighting guerillas of Jugoslavia, arrives on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater next Thursday, adventure lovers who can adjust their romantic inclinations to factual incident will be in for a bit of a treat.

HELEN HAYES

The group of guests assembled by Division Manager Carter Barron of Loew's for yesterday's luncheon-preview discovered in "Chetniks" a subject which in parts of its thrilling length outdid the most flamboyant of the American "Westerns" in the turbulence of its action. The effect, however, was not that of violence and excitement for their own sakes, but of the heroism of a sturdy nation of free men who loved their freedom supplying to their history books the equivalent of our Revolutionary War.

While the stamp of Hollywood occasionally may be discernible as "Chetniks" unfolds its inspiring story of defiance of the Nazi yoke, the spectator realizes that he is witnessing a reproduction of factual events and not something steamed up in the inflamed mind of an imaginative fictionist. On the word of Jugoslavs in attendance at yesterday's screening—one a major in the air forces of his country—the episodes upon which the film narrative is based all actually have happened in his country. Not necessarily in the chronological order depicted on the screen, but sufficiently close to be accepted as authentic.

The result is a picture that it would be well for every man-jack of all the United Nations to see, as an inspirational example worthy of world-wide emulation. And besides all that, "Chetniks" is exciting and gripping entertainment, with no little human warmth, gentleness and courage woven into its warp and woot.

As an aid to acceptance of the truth of the episodes pictured in "Chetniks," it would be well to know that before the 49-year-old Mihailovitch, an officer in the Jugoslav army, could be given contrary orders, when the fall of his country to the Nazis seemed imminent, he gathered the forces under his command and fled to the mountains with all of the equipment he could muster and carried on his own fight. He now controls approximately 20,000 square miles of his country's total area of 95,000 square miles. The forces still operating under his command are estimated at from 150,000 to 170,000 men, and steadily growing. At the time of America's entry into North Africa, he sabotaged transportation facilities to the extent of delaying for about three weeks any possible movement of Nazi aid through Jugoslavia in that direction. If Jugoslavia wishes a George Washington, it has one in Mihailovitch.

The Mailman Breaks A Record

Shattering all existing records in the more than a century's history of the National Theater, the mail-order, advance sale of seats for Helen Hayes' forthcoming fortnight's engagement in "Harriet" ran up the staggering total of $22,867 as of last Wednesday night, the night before the Thursday box-office sale opened. The prior record was held by Maurice Evans' production of "Macbeth," which had 15,900 in mail orders before the public ticket window was raised. Figured on the usual percentages, this means that there will not be seats enough to meet the demand for any performance during Miss Hayes' stay in the Capital.

Mr. J. Raymond Bell—no relation—formerly in charge of advertising and publicity for the Loew Theaters in Washington, is returning to the old home grounds in a new capacity on February 15. He has been appointed to the post of director of advertising and public relations for the Pennsylvania Central Airlines, with headquarters at the National Airport in this city. For the past year, or two, or three, Ray has been attached to the publicity department of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures, in New York City. Congratulations, fella, and welcome home, say we!

On Sunday night, the United Nations Club will launch a new activity with the inauguration of its Foreign Feature Cinema. The opening program will be dedicated to Russia, with "Russian Children at War" and "The Life of Alexander Nevsky" the featured films. Screening will begin at 7:15 p. m., at Hotel 2400. Light supper will be served after the showing of the pictures, at 9 o'clock or thereabouts. Programs celebrating the other United Nations will be presented each Sunday night thereafter.

"Green Grow the Lilacs," the Theater Guild's new musical version of Lynn Riggs' play which the Guild originally produced years ago, has gone into rehearsal in New York. It will open, according to present plans, in the Shubert Theater, New Haven, on Thursday evening, March 11, and thence proceed to the Colonial Theater in Boston for two weeks as the Hub's fourth subscription play of the season, beginning Monday evening, March 15. "No future bookings, as yet." Come, come, Miss Helburn and Mr. Langner, Washington is a two-week subscription city, too. Remember?

And-Nice-Work-They-Do Note

Oh, speaking of those "Chetniks," Philip Dorn plays the role of Mihailovitch, with Anna Sten in the leading feminine role.

Earle

With so variegated a story, such a cash and a super-duper production, there was probably no way out of continuing "Casablanca" a second week at the Earle Theater. So that is what the Warner management did.

Entirely apart from the fortunate coincidence of its title with recent historic events, "Casablanca" is ne plus ultra entertainment. It has mystery, romance, thrills, humor, suspense and a unique and persuasive love motif. Humphrey Bogart, Paul Henreid and Ingrid Bergman, the costars, alone probably could have carried the film to high success. But the producers made assurance doubly sure by chucking such topflight players as Claude Rains, Sydney Greenstreet, Peter Lorre, Conrad Veidt, Dooley Wilson and a dozen or two more into the major supporting roles. Under Michael Curtiz's direction they turn in an ensemble performance that is strictly nonpareil.

The stage bill, of course, is being carried along into the present semester en toto.

Alexis Gets Cheers From College Chum

From Howard Lloyd, her leadnig man in student plays at Los Angeles City College and now an American soldier "somewhere in North Africa," Alexis Smith has received belated congratulations upon her promotion to the ranks of Warner Brothers stars.

In his letter to Miss Smith, Lloyd wrote that he had read in a British newspaper of her advancement to stardom because of her work in "Gentleman Jim."

"I apologize," he said in his letter, "for just thinking, when we worked together, that you might be a star. I should have known it!"

Columbia

One would think that an occasion in a young man's life, such as departing for college, would call for a certain amount of ceremony in the household but a minimum of excitement. Not so in the case of "Andy Hardy's Double Life," currently at the Columbia Theater.

On the threshold of knowledge and learning, Andy Hardy, or Mickey Rooney, since the two are one, or vice versa, not only manages to complicate his own life, but the lives of the other members of the famous family. All this, of course, is done in the spirit of good, clean fun with mnay hilarious situations arising in the course of events.

The complications are finally untangled in time to speed Andy on his way to a stronghold of higher learning. The "double trouble" of the title refers to Ann Rutherford and Estelle Williams, with Lewis Stone, Fay Holden and Celia Parker continuing in their familiar roles.

Metropolitan

Having been crowded out of the Earle Theater at the height of its run, Columbia's "Commandos Strike at Dawn" now is picking up where it left off at the Metropolitan Theater.

With Paul Muni, Lillian Gish, Anna Lee and Sir Cedric Hardwicke in the stellar roles, this story of occupied Norway is one of the significant pictures of the year in its clarion call to victory. The Commando raid, from which the film derives its title, is made doubly realistic by the utilization of bona-fide Canadian Commandos, instead of studio actors, in the climax of the action.

This subject is a rarity among screenplays coming out of the war by reason of the restraint it employs in emphasizing all that it has to say—which is much—through the paradoxical means of understatement. A valuable and exciting piece of work, with Muni at the top of his form.

Latest Addition to the Glamour Group whose beauty is so strikingly untyped and personality so ingratiating that Paramount leaped over precedent and placed her in the leading feminine role in "Lucky Jordan," starring Alan Ladd, a month after she landed in the West Coast film colony, innocent of any film experience. However, she had had six seasons on the stage—which seems distinctly to be the loser in the deal

HEDDA HOPPER

Selznick Steps Out!

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 12.—David Selznick went east to buy full control in United Artists and, if and when he gets it, he'll have the biggest producing organization in Hollywood — and here's why. He'd not only have the pictures made by Hunt Stromberg Jimmy Cagney, and Eddie Small, besides the people he already has under contract, such as Alfred Hitchcock, Ingrid Bergman, Joan Fontaine, Jennifer Jones, Dorothy McGuire, Joseph Cotten, Alan Marshall, and half a dozen writers, but he'd be able to corral most of the top free lance players, help finance their pictures, act as their coordinator.

DAVID O. SELZNICK

This would take in directors like Howard Hawks, whose "Air Force" is a smash hit everywhere; Sam Wood, whose "For Whom the Bell Tolls" will be; free lance stars like Cary Grant, Gary Cooper, Ginger Rogers, Charles Boyer, Ronald Colman, and if that isn't a list to stagger one's imagination!

They're the people who draw crowds to the boxoffice and when they begin making their own the old order of things will be changing in this town. Some former czars will be taking a back seat—and about time, too.

David is also considering two radio shows—one to produce and take part in and the other to do a job similar to that of De Mille on Lux. He's as full of plans as a dog is fleas and they've got him hopping.

Own Talent Scout

Ran into Howard Hawks at lunch with a newcomer named Ella Raines. She's a beauty—brunette, personality plus, and before I left them discovered she's already got the only feminine lead in Howard's new picture. He and Charles Boyer signed her under joint contract. She's training in summer stock, small parts, etc., and is something to shout about. . . . Cary Grant won't do "Claudia" and here's why: Twentieth hopes the first will catch on. If it does they'll turn it into a series like "The Thin Man." Cary doesn't want to start a series—he has too many other plans. At present he's planning to give camp shows back East, then go overseas with Don Barclay. They've worked out a honey of a sketch together which got a howling okay at the Hollywood Canteen. . . . Incidentally there's no truth whatever to that unfounded rumor that all is not well with Cary and Barbara. I lunched with her last week and she told me she was never happier.

How 'Bout a Radio Academy?

Now that 10 top pictures have been selected for Academy awards, and "Yankee Doodle Dandy" is one of the leaders, I think it only fair to give credit to Sid Skolsky. Two companies turned it down. Sid went personally to George M. Cohan, suggested Jimmy Cagney as star, and Cohan agreed. So let's give a nod to Sid for making it a personal issue . . . Billy Paley, head of C. B. S., is here for a 10 days' visit and look-see . . . Speaking about Academy awards, they're helpful and healthy for our industry, so why doesn't the radio adopt the idea and have an Academy of radio and allow the public to have a voice in what they consider the best show of the year and why? It would be a healthy trend. Then, too, we'd really find out what the public wants. How about it, fans?

Taps for Two Gallants

Our industry lost two of its finest men—Dr. Giannini, banker, always ready to help out producers when they ran short of cash—a kindly, understanding gentleman, and Director Woody Van Dyke, who never failed to help what some call the little people. I prefer to think of them as the gallant ones—those who ran into hard luck, many of them picture pioneers. Woody had a list of their names, wouldn't do a picture without them. Once he held up shooting six hours because a certain woman who needed the job wasn't on the set. I'm glad his last picture, "Journey For Margaret," was such a hit. He gave Metro a new star, Margaret O'Brien. It was Woody's understanding of children, having three of his own, which helped so much. More than a year before we went into war he turned his office at the studio into a recruiting office for the marines. He was a great, colorful character. We'll keep on missing him.

The Brighter Side

Judy Garland isn't taking her separation too seriously. She and her sister were at Ciro's the other night with a couple of male escorts . . . At same place Mary Martin gave a farewell party and Margo was celebrating her return. Lieut. George Vanderbilt hovering over Rochelle Hudson . . . Bob Hope, Dolores and a half a hundred others turned up at Bill Lawrence's housewarming cocktail party.

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Potpourri

New York, Feb. 12.

Before Leon Henderson left Washington, he sat in a restaurant into which came a major general of the Air Corps. Henderson stared at the officer, who walked by him without a sign of recognition. "I know most of the major generals in Washington," said Henderson, who then was the most photographed public figure in America, "but I don't know who he is" . . . When the officer was leaving, Henderson said: "Hello, general." The officer nodded, coldly, and again failed to recognize the famous man who addressed him . . . "That proves it," Henderson assured the proprietor of the restaurant. "He must be a phoney."

PAT O'BRIEN

Madame Chiang Kai-shek's long postponed meeting with the President will take place in mid-February . . . Madame Chiang has had a few visitors at the hospital—Eleanor Roosevelt, Wendell Willkie, Pearl Buck and Lin Yutang . . . Robert E. Sherwood has won his battle with Col. William J. Donovan, over the right to supervise American films going abroad . . . Pat O'Brien is flying first to Ireland, and then to England

John Hersey, the Life correspondent who went to the Solomons, reports of a South Pacific island where he saw a marine reading a copy of Sigmund Freud's "General Introduction to Psychonalysis" . . . "Why are you reading a book like that?" Hersey asked him . . . "Because there are only 20 books on the island," the marine explained, "and I've read the others" . . . "Do you like Freud's book?" Hersey continued. "Is it helpful?" . . . "Not yet," sighed the marine, "but it will be—if I stay around here a little longer."

Paul Lukas, who just finished his tour as the anti-Nazi in "Watch on the Rhine," leaves for Hollywood this week to play a Nazi in "Hostages" . . . The Polish army officer who drew the illustrations for the OWI's "Tale of a City," a case history of the Nazi treatment of Warsaw, is named Czermansky. He drew the illustrations in less than two weeks . . . Of all the books contributed to the Victory Book Campaign, the one most represented is the book by Herbert Hoover and former Ambassador Gibson. One thousand copies of this volume were contributed, for distribution among the servicemen, by the Hoover Library on War, Peace and Revolution.

When the Duke and Duchess of Windsor lived in France, Grace Moore came to the village where they were spending a weekend. When the townfolk congregated in the square before their hotel, the Duchess of Windsor bowed to them regally. Miss Moore, however, burst into song, and the town orchestra improvised an accompaniment . . . "Well, you've captured them," the duchess told Miss Moore. "It's more than just your singing. What's the secret?" . . . "It isn't a secret," Grace replied. "Just don't be so royal, Ma'am."

The World-Telegram composing room had a slug marked "Herbie" over a story about Herbert Hoover, which was to be published within the next few days. "Change that slug immediately," was the order—the first time a slug ever has been edited—"It's irreverent" . . . The Federal Church of Christ is sending to 200,000 soldiers copies of Dorothy Crowell's "Booklet on Marriage"—in which the author advises men in uniform not to postpone their marriage until the war is over . . . Block and Sully, now at Loew's State, will turn temporarily to the legitimate theater next month, when they'll appear in "Vickie," in Boston.

Elliot Paul, author of "The Last Time I Saw Paris," reported that he once took his pads and pencils to the restaurant in the Eiffel Tower and spent his days there writing a new book. "That's a strange place for a writer to work," Irving Hoffman told him. "You must have had a great affection for the Eiffel Tower" . . . "On the contrary," Paul explained. "I worked in the Tower because it's the only place in Paris where I could avoid seeing the damn thing."

Al Jolson was in the Stork Club, reminiscing of the days when he first was billed as the World's Greatest Entertainer. His appearance in any theater would assure a sell-out . . . The Shuberts negotiated for his appearance at a theater they owned in Chicago, and a 4-week booking was mentioned. "I want $10,000 a week, for four weeks," Jolson insisted . . . He finally received that price, but only after the Shuberts became convinced that he was worth it. Their first objection was an explanation of the system under which they operated: "We won't pay you $10,000 a week, because we won't be making $10,000 a week. And in the theater, it's elementary that no star should make more than the producer."

Two pages of Stage and Screen appear in Sunday's Post.

Horton Resigns Information Post at OPA

Robert W. Horton, deputy administrator of the Office of Price Administration in charge of information, has resigned his post, effective sometime next week, it was learned yesterday.

He will be succeeded by Lou R. Maxon, Detroit advertising executive, who is reported to be a close friend of OPA Administrator Prentiss Brown.

Horton thus becomes the first OPA policy-making official to leave the organization since Brown replaced Leon Henderson as price administrator in mid-January.

Appointment of the advertising executive is expected to mark a stepping up in an effort to "sell" the country on OPA's program. It was reported that the shift was made with the understanding that the Office of War Information would play a more active role in determining OPA informational policies.

Horton, who has been with the Government since the early defense days, was a former Washington correspondent for Scripps-Howard newspapers. He headed the Office of Emergency Management Information Division which handled news releases for all Government war agencies until last summer when the OEM division was absorbed by OWI.

He served for a time as chief of the OWI news bureau and then accepted appointment as deputy administrator of OPA.

Maxon is chairman of the board of Maxon, Inc., a Detroit advertising firm, and has had a long record of experience in the advertising business.

Archbishop's Union Letter Held Intrusion

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 12.—Bishop William T. Manning tonight branded as an "ecclesiastical intrusion" and "highly improper" a recently published letter of the Archbishop of Canterbury which said proposed union of the Episcopal and Presbyterian Churches would be "a great contribution toward the cause we all have at heart."

The letter of the Most Rev. William Temple, appearing in recent Episcopal Church publications, among them the Churchmen and the Living Church, was addressed to the Right Rev. Edward L. Parsons, retired Bishop of California and chairman of the Commission on Approaches to Unity.

Declaring "the proposal in question is a most acutely controversial one in the Episcopal Church and for that reason, if for no other, the archbishop should have refrained from any expression in regard to it," the Bishop of New York said in a letter to church papers:

"The presiding bishop of our own church has not felt it right to express himself publicly on this controversial question; why then should the Archbishop of Canterbury be asked by Bishop Parsons to make a statement for publication in regard to it, and why has the archbishop allowed himself to do so?"

Bishop Manning said the Archbishop of Canterbury was "gravely misinformed" if he obtained the impression that the majority of Episcopalians favored union with the Presbyterian Church.

J. W. Considine, Vaudeville Pioneer, Dies

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 12.—John W. Considine, sr., whose career began in the Klondike and progressed through the colorful cabaret era of the early West to coownership of one of America's greatest vaudeville circuits, is dead.

Stricken Tuesday, he succumbed to pneumonia last night at the age of 80. His friend the Rev. Father E. J. Flanagan of Boys' Town was at the bedside.

Considine said "Big Tim" Sullivan organized the Sullivan-Considine circuit in New York in 1901. The circuit gave some of the biggest names of the stage and screen their start—among them Charles Chaplin, Will Rogers, Marie Dressler and Aibini, the magician. In 1914 Considine sold out to Marcus Loew for a reported six million dollars.

Born in Chicago, he went to Seattle in 1889, then joined the Alaska gold rush with Wilson Mizner, raconteur and playwright; Tex Rickard and Sid Grauman, Los Angeles theater operator. Considine opened Seattle's first cabaret upon his return from Alaska, and resided there until 1902.

For years Considine and Alexander Pantages, whom he also met in the Klondike, operated competing vaudeville circuits. Their bitter rivalry, says Considine's son, John W. Considine, jr., M-G-M producer, prevailed until the son married Pantages' daughter, Carmen, in 1932.

The elder Considine lived in Los Angeles since 1921. Surviving besides the son, are the wife, Elizabeth A. Considine, and two daughters, Mrs. E. W. MacLean and Mrs. Thomas R. Conlin. Funeral arrangements are pending.

Last Member Of Md. G. A. R. Dies at Age of 103

Rock Hall, Md., Feb. 12 (AP).—Joseph Hynson, last known Maryland member of the blue-clad army which fought under Commander in Chief Abraham Lincoln, died today—Lincoln's birthday—at the age of 103.

When he was 20 years old, Hynson joined Company D of the First Maryland Division, Union Army, with his two brothers. His regiment was present when Gen. Robert E. Lee surrendered at Appomattox Courthouse.

Hynson was a life-long resident of Kent County, Md., and was commander of the Grande Army of the Republic.
